

CRITICS OF FARM BOARD CANNOT CHANGE POLICY

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1930, by Post Pub. Co.

Washington — (CPA) — Although criticisms are coming in that the Federal Farm board is deviating from policies of the government in aiding agriculture in the past in coming with private interests, there is no intention of changing the policy.

LAWRENCE

In fact, the board's program, it is pointed out, is essentially the same as the one which was approved during the Coolidge administration and was made the basis of the Republican national platform adopted at the Kansas City convention in 1928.

Chairman Legge of the Federal Farm board has denied that either the board or the stabilization corporations affiliated with it will engage in speculation in the grain market and that all grain purchased on future contracts will be marketed as conditions permit. The grain stabilization corporation is to continue buying grain at market prices and thus remove from the market "whatever additional quantity that may be necessary to relieve the pressure and prevent any considerable decline in wheat prices."

HALF OF FUND USED

Approximately one-half of the $150,000,000 made available by Congress by the revolving fund of $500,000,000 has been used. But it is not expected that the board will need further appropriations, though the leaders in Congress have promised that any sums needed will be advanced. Chairman Legge says that the point has not been reached where additional funds will be asked.

The stabilization corporation and the Farmer's National Grain corporation through which the farm board act are now responsible for about 25,000,000 bushels of wheat while the visible supply is reported to be about 160,000,000 bushels. The chairman of the farm board is insisting that no effort is being made to fix the price but that purchases would continue to be made at market prices.

What has happened is that the plan to stabilize the level of prices by making large purchases is being given its first real test as a formula in agricultural economics. Secretary Jardine under the Coolidge administration worked in close cooperation with Mr. Hoover when the stabilization plan was first brought out and the difference between the two views was finally passed and the legislation passed during the Coolidge administration was that in the latter a specific plan was required whereas in the former broad discretionary powers were vested in the farm board to apply whatever formula seemed desirable.

CONFERRED WITH HOOVER

The latest announcement by Chairman Legge that his intention to advise money to relieve pressure on the markets through the stabilization plan came after a conference at the White House with President Hoover and Secretary Hyde. This means that the critics of the plan will not be able to drive a wedge between the White House and the farm board and that responsibility for the operation of the farm board is assumed by the president who sponsored the federal farm act.

While the farm board has applied the same principles to other commodities it is recognized here that the success or failure of the whole farm board program as developed by the board depends on the ability to maintain a level of prices in wheat. "The theory of the farm board is that it cannot fix a price arbitrarily but that it can prevent speculators and others from manipulating the prices while the crop is being marketed for future delivery. It is contended that the farm board's information on world conditions is bound to be more comprehensive than that of private agencies and that the board is really using government funds to support a basic yield which the farmers themselves are entitled to get on the world conditions but which they cannot get except through co-operative organizations acting for them in the marketing of their products."

JUSTICE EDWARD SANFORD DIES

BEER BARON MURDERED IN NEW JERSEY

Machine Gunner Who Killed Him Commits Suicide After Being Cornered

Hoboken, N. J. — (AP) — Police today blamed a feud engendered in his beer running days for the killing of Frankie Dunn, retired millionaire beer baron of north Jersey.

Dunn was set upon yesterday by three men. After two of them felled him with blows of their fists, the third turned a sub-machine gun on him. Two bullets passed through his body. He died in a hospital a few hours later.

The machine gunner, later identified as Frank Dugan of New York, committed suicide when police cornered him on the top floor of an apartment house. The others escaped after a running gun fight with police.

Dunn recently announced his retirement from the beer traffic along the Jersey shore of the Hudson river, where he had ruled for several years. He bought the office building in the business section of Hoboken and also acquired a co-op. He was reported to have made more than $2,000,000 in his beer traffic.

In their search for a motive for the slaying, police today harked back to the killing of James (Bugs) Donovan, a salesman for Dunn, who was shot to death in Manhattan last November, and to the fatal shooting of Harry Veasy, a Brooklyn bootlegger whose body was found in an automobile in Hoboken, in December.

After shooting Dunn the machine gunner ran out the rear exit of the building while his companions escaped through the front entrance. In the alley he was joined by another man who carried a pistol. A policeman chased them, firing as he ran.

As the fugitives reached a limousine parked nearby Patrolman John O'Leary joined the fight, and while his companion tried to start the car Dunn stood off the police. A machine gun bullet clipped the tips off three fingers on O'Leary's left hand. Unable to start the car, the driver abandoned it and escaped. Dugan backed into an apartment house, firing his machine gun at the officers.

The sound of the shooting was heard at police headquarters and Chief McGehee led 15 officers to the aid of the two policemen.

As the officers neared the top of the three story building they heard a shot and then came upon the body of the machine gunner with a pistol bullet through his head.

Students Face Arrest For Ending Parade Of Workless

Warrants Issued Charge Five With Disorderly Con- duct at Madison

Madison — (AP) — Warrants charging five University of Wisconsin students with disorderly conduct in breaking up a parade of the unemployed here Thursday were issued by Police Chief F. L. Trostle today.

Those named in the warrants are E. P. Millard, New London, Robert Sykes, Madison; E. J. Mittermeyer, Boyl; Charles W. Adamson, Wauwatosa, and John McCarter, Madison.

Arrest of the five students was requested by a "University Civil Liberties committee" after the American Civil Liberties union of New York had wired a protest to Chief Trostle.

The students whose arrests are sought led a group of about 50 university students, many of them athletes, on the parade soon after it got under way. The leader of the parade, David Gordon, New York, a student, was seized and a girl was knocked down to the pavement. The banners carried by the parade leaders were smashed and the leaders were threatened to be thrown into Lake Mendota.

Protest against the action of the students found its way to the University campus in the form of a petition. Several campus leaders and members of the faculty signed the petition asking for redress. The parade had been authorized by the police a day in advance.

The Civil Liberties committee has called a meeting of protest for tonight. Among those who will address the gathering are Prof. William Gorham Rice of the law school and Prof. Joseph K. Hart of the educational department, both prominent members of the faculty.

Those things had developed as an aftermath to the Capitol square parade of Communists—some of them students—and unemployed.

1. Police Chief Franklin L. Trostle began an investigation to fix responsibility and determine if punitive action should be taken against the student pranksters.

2. "University Civil Liberties committee," including in its membership campus leaders and professors, was organized and issued a manifesto condemning the youths who transformed the parade from a protest to a hulesque snake-dance around the square. A mass-meeting was called for tonight.

3. The American Civil Liberties union of New York wired Chief Trostle a protest and suggested an investigation.

4. The Daily Cardinal, campus newspaper, printed the names of five students as ringleaders of the band and said they all had admitted taking part.

Vagrancy and disorderly conduct charges brought them to court today while the trial of their compatriots on more serious charges was at a standstill till Monday.

Fifteen men face counts of inciting a riot and if convicted may be sentenced to prison for a year. They are the alleged ringleaders in the hand-to-hand fighting which police called the most serious since the wartime draft riots in the Bay View district of Milwaukee.

In groups of five, the 15 went on trial yesterday. They were as unperturbed by incriminating testimony of police as were the officers accustomed to court procedure. After hearing eight witnesses, Judge George Shaugnessy set bond for each accused man at $250.

Nuno could furnish it and went back to the city jail "bull pen" where associates awaited their turn for court appearance. All will appear Monday.

DETROIT PATROLMAN
KILLED IN GUN FIGHT
Detroit — (AP) — Patrolman Dayton A. Winegar was shot to death at 9 o'clock a. m. today in a gun battle on St. Aubine with two robbers who were fleeing with $5,000 obtained in a haberdashery holdup. The robbers escaped.

Henry succeeded in running the car 20 city blocks, then the trolley came off. A policeman saw the car was blocking traffic and found Henry in the motorist's cab.

The jail physician said Henry was intoxicated, but what Pittsburgh railway officials want to know is how Henry got the car out of the barns.

GEORGE HUCKINS GOES
ON TRIAL NEXT WEEK
Colar Rapids, Iowa — (AP) — George E. Huckins, alleged financial wizard who has been confined to the state hospital at Independence during the last five weeks, undergoing treatment for nervousness, will be released not later than Monday.

Receiving that information, Colar Rapids Attorney Carl Hendrickson today made plans to start Huckins' trial on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses Tuesday. Similar charges have been filed against his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer S. Huckins of Hancock, Wis.

Governor Kohler refused to sign extradition papers for the return of Mrs. Huckins while her husband's return has been delayed for several months by various court actions. At present he has an appeal pending on a writ of habeas corpus.

TRY TO RUSH ACTIVITIES AT ARMS PARLEY

French Stand Presents Big- gest Problems at Lon- don Conference

London — (AP) — Pressed for time because of the French cabinet crisis, the naval conference continued its labors today, the delegates foregoing the Saturday holiday in order to make as much progress as possible.

There is considerable anxiety in several of the delegations, especially among the Americans, over the diminishing amount of time left in this month. Counting out weekends there were only 14 working days. With this in view, Prime Minister MacDonald has indicated to all the delegations his hope that possibly they will forego some of their Saturdays in order to rush the conference to the earliest possible conclusion.

The Americans' willingness to work over the weekend was indicated by the fact that Senator David A. Reed conferred this morning with Ambassador Matsudaira of Japan while Secretary Stimson and Ambassador Morrow conferred with Foreign Secretary Henderson at the foreign office. Foreign Minister Briand of France had luncheon with Mr. Henderson and then accepted an invitation from Secretary Stimson to have tea at Stan-

IN SUNDAY CONFAB
Even Sunday will be utilized for the first time, foreign Minister Briand and Prime Minister MacDonald having planned a meeting at Chislehurst.

The United States and Great Britain have reached virtual understanding on a limitation arrangement permitting "parity" between them, and while Japan still is holding out for a higher cruiser ratio than the United States has been willing to grant few doubt that a compromise arrangement also is within reach there.

But Mr. Briand, who has just returned with a French representation after an absence of three weeks, presents a problem of another order. His government's demand for a naval tonnage, considered excessive by Great Britain, and the alternative of political pacts or arrangements guaranteeing French security as the price of limitation at a lower figure.

COALITION MAY FORCE
NEW SUGAR DUTY VOTE
Washington — (AP) — Leaders of the coalition of Democrats and Republican independents who suffered their greatest setback in the senate trial contest this week when a higher duty on sugar and a rate on cement commanded majorities contended today they had the votes to reconsider sugar and probably would move for it on Monday.

Action on a proposal to restore existing presidential tariffs on window glass was deferred by the senate on Monday.

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, whose amendment to maintain present rates on sugar was carried by 10 votes early in the contest, said today the coalition would win a reconsideration of this week's vote to increase the Cuban raw sugar rate from 1.25 to 2 cents a pound, which was carried by a majority of eight.

The final outcome of the test, however, was in doubt, and Senator Smoot, Utah, who proposed the 2-cent rate, said he did not know how the issue finally would be settled. Senator Doherty, of Idaho, an Independent Republican leader, likewise expressed doubt as to the outcome.

WILLYS NOMINATION
APPROVED BY SENATE
Washington — (AP) — The nomination of John N. Willys to be ambassador to Poland was confirmed without discussion today by the senate.

Willys will succeed the late Alexander L. Moore, who would have held the post at Warsaw, which was recently vacated from ministerial to ambassadorial rank. Mr. Moore died before he could go to Warsaw to present his credentials.

SAYS PRICE HAD OWN
PROTECTION BUSINESS
Madison — (AP) — The web of evidence today tightened around Clinton D. Price, suspended district attorney of Juneau, as witnesses told how he set up an independent business of protecting bootleggers after breaking relations with Lyle T. Wright, ousted sheriff of the county.

Federal Judge F. L. Wham adjourned the case until Monday after the prosecution started on the second count in the indictment. The second count against Price, who is a former assemblyman, centers around a raid conducted on a Juneau saloon last Aug. 4, 1929.

Albert Engers, Chicago bootlegger now under deferred sentence for violating the prohibition laws, gave testimony to show that Price operated an independent "protection business" after the harmony between the district attorney and Wright was shattered by a dispute over profits.

Report Vare Out Of Race; Backs Davis

Pittsburgh — (AP) — Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, who was expected to announce his candidacy for the United States senate here, said today that he would have nothing to say "for a day or two."

Philadelphia — (AP) — William S. Vare is preparing to announce his formal withdrawal as a candidate for the United States senate and his support of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis for the senatorial nomination and former Attorney General Francis Shunk Brown for the government, Republican leaders declared here today.

Before making the anticipated announcement, Mr. Vare, who arrived here yesterday from his winter home in St. Lucie, Fla., today will undergo a thorough physical examination to determine whether his physical condition is such that he can enter and go through a strenuous political campaign.

Mr. Vare conferred with Davis, Brown, State Senator Samuel Salus, and William D. Hughes, who have been conducting his senatorial campaign here last night. After the conference, it was said, Vare had decided to assume leadership of the anti-Grundy flight throughout the state and would endorse Davis for senator and Brown for governor.

No formal statement was made on the result of the conference. Before leaving for Pittsburgh last night Davis said: "I think tonight, Davis said: 'If and when I shall announce my candidacy will depend on my talks in Pittsburgh. My course will not depend in the least on what Mr. Vare does.'"

DOHENY'S BRIBERY CASE OPENS MONDAY

Expected to Be Last Criminal Action Growing Out of Oil Scandals

Washington — (AP) — What is expected to be the last criminal action growing out of the oil scandals of the Harding administration will begin Monday with Edward L. Doheny facing a charge of having bribed former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall to execute the famous lease on the Elk Hills Naval petroleum reserve.

Confident that he will be acquitted, in spite of the fact that Fall was convicted on the same charge a few months ago, Doheny is here ready to go on trial take the stand himself and again tell his story of lending $100,000 to Fall, a friend of many years standing.

Frank J. Hogan, who has served as chief counsel for the defense in all the criminal actions arising from the oil leases will plead Doheny's case, assisted by Joseph J. Cotten, who was counsel for Doheny's Pan-American company when it negotiated the Elk Hills lease.

Alton Pomeroy and Owen J. Roberts will serve again as special prosecutors for the government. "They have announced that they are ready for the trial and expect no delay," both government and defense attorneys have said that no new witnesses will be introduced and no new issues raised.

EDWARD T. SANFORD

Holmes, 89, Is Honored On Birthday

Washington — (AP) — The eighty-ninth birthday of Oliver Wendell Holmes was celebrated in the senate today which paused in its consideration of the tariff bill to listen to a brief speech of tribute delivered a short time before the members of the supreme court gathered in the conference chamber of the highest tribunal to extend personal greetings to the veteran jurist.

Hardly had the senate convened this morning before Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, interrupted the tariff discussion to call attention to the birthday anniversary of his distinguished fellow Bay Stater whose once erect military carriage now is somewhat bowed with age although his step still is firm.

Recalling that the 27 years of service by Justice Holmes set a record for the supreme court, Senator Walsh referred to the justice as "one of the noblest and most patriotic members of the American judiciary."

"Few men have been spared to give so many years of service to the nation," he added, explaining that Holmes had been on the highest court of Massachusetts and on the supreme court of the United States for a total of 47 years.

"It is a record that Holmes' 'unimpaired legal opinions have made him a national figure' and praised him for his 'vision, culture, courage, sympathy, and liberality.'"

Senator La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, said he "subscribed to the beautiful tribute" by Walsh and placed in the Congressional Record an article on Justice Holmes in the current issue of the Harper's magazine.

It was, so far as his own arrangements were concerned, only another day to be spent attending to pleasant duties. Justice Holmes had arranged to rather with his colleagues in the familiar quarters of the conference room. The rest of the day was to be spent quietly. Mrs. Holmes died only a few months ago and anniversary now did not call for celebration.

While Justice Holmes attached no particular significance to the day it did not go unnoticed by hundreds of friends and admirers all over the country. The stream of telegrams and letters and telephone calls he got early in the morning and continued steadily through the day.

Justice Holmes today finished 27 years and three months on the supreme bench. He was appointed by President Roosevelt, confirmed by the senate on Dec. 4, 1902, and took his seat on Dec. 8.

Ward of Justice Sanford's death was received shortly after physicians had reported that the condition of his former chief, William Howard Taft, was less favorable than it had been earlier this week. Justice Sanford's daughter, Mrs. George Cameron, who is in Florida, was notified immediately. Word also was hurriedly dispatched to other relatives.

A native of Knoxville, Tenn., Justice Sanford was appointed to the supreme court in 1923 by the late President Harding. Tentative funeral plans are for burial in Tennessee.

Word of the justice's death, was a shock to his colleagues, many of whom still were in their offices or rooms of the court at the capital.

The senate had recessed just a few minutes before his death became known. The house adjourned yesterday over the weekend. The justices and many friends both on the bench and in congress immediately expressed their regret.

IS STRICKEN AS HE LEAVES DENTAL CHAIR

Dies Shortly After He Is Taken to His Home After Tooth Extraction

WAS NAMED BY HARDING Colleagues Paying Tribute to Holmes on Birthday as Death Comes

Washington — (AP) — Justice Edward Terry Sanford of the supreme court, died at his home here today a few minutes after noon.

The news of his death came with startling unexpectedness. The fact that he was ill became generally known only a few minutes before the word of the end was received. He was taken ill this morning while visiting his dentist, and was rushed to his home. He died a few minutes later.

The exact time of death was 12:20 p. m. Friends of the justice had not heard of his complaining of ill health. Only yesterday he sat upon the bench with his colleagues. This morning, as soon as the tooth was extracted, he became nauseated and began to bleed profusely.

It was believed that he became unconscious almost immediately. His attending physician, Dr. J. Law Thompson, who has offices in the same apartment, was quickly summoned to the office of Dr. Arthur B. Crane, the dentist.

The seriousness of the condition, of the justice quickly became apparent. During the present week, while on the bench and in attendance on the meetings of the court, the justice seemingly has been, normal in every respect, participating actively in the hearing of all cases, frequently interrupting with questions.

POISONING BLAMED
The justice's death was credited by friends of the family to a sudden attack of uremic poisoning, which developed about 10:30 this morning. A physician was summoned immediately but the justice succumbed shortly after 12 o'clock. Mrs. Sanford was with him at the time but other relatives including a daughter, Mrs. George Cameron, were out of the city. Mrs. Cameron is at present in Florida. They have been summoned.

Justice Sanford, who has seemingly been in good health, sat on the supreme court bench yesterday. This morning, however, he went to his dentist who extracted a tooth. Justice Sanford then became ill. His physician, Dr. J. Law Thompson, was summoned. He was removed to his residence as quickly as possible. Later it was said he had developed symptoms of uremic trouble.

His colleagues on the supreme bench had gathered in the court conference room and were congratulating Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes on his eighty-ninth birthday at about the time he passed away.

Justice Sanford was 64 years of age and was named to the supreme bench by President Harding in January, 1923, and took his seat the following February.

He was born in Knoxville, Tenn., and was a graduate of the University of Tennessee and of Harvard. Before he was nominated as an associate justice he had practiced law in his native state and was a federal judge.

He was an assistant attorney general of the United States in 1904 and 1908 and frequently appeared before court during that period.

COLLEAGUES ASTOUNDED
Astounded and saddened by the news of Justice Sanford's death, the other members who were in the conference room discussing cases that had been argued, immediately adjourned and some of them went immediately to his home to express their regret and sympathy.

New of the sudden illness of the justice became known only a few minutes before death. He had been rushed to his home from the dentist's office where he had a tooth extracted.

Employment To Improve In 60 Days, Hoover Believes

WORST EFFECT OF DECLINE AT END, HE SAYS

Spring Will Bring Return to Normal Prosperity in United States

Washington — (P) — A thorough study of the present economic situation has convinced President Hoover that within a month or two the more serious effects of last fall's stock market crash will be passed with unemployment conditions definitely on the mend.

To the increased out-of-doors construction work that comes each year as the weather grows warmer and to the expanded building programs of the railroads, public utilities and private industries the chief executive looks to bring about this result.

Mr. Hoover's views on the situation were summarized in a statement, issued to Washington newspapermen late yesterday, based in a statistical study made by interested departments and consultation with the business organization set up by the president as a part of his program for economic stabilization. At the same time, a joint statement by the heads of the commerce and labor departments was made public.

"All the evidences indicate," the chief executive said, "that the worst effects of the (stock market) crash upon employment will have been passed during the next 60 days with the amelioration of seasonal unemployment, the gaining strength of other forces and the continued cooperation of the many agencies actively cooperating with the government to restore business and to relieve distress."

LOW POINTS PASSED
Unemployment, he said, is serious in but 12 states and hardly more than seasonal in the remaining 36. He added that the low points of business and employment were passed in December and that a gradual improvement had been noted since that time.

The chief executive predicted that, with wage rates maintained, low interest rates prevailing and increased expansion expenditures by railroads and utilities, the advance of spring will witness a return to normal prosperity.

An important and beneficial influence upon the situation, he continued, has been the "nation-wide response to the request for increased construction by public authorities, railroads, utilities and industries." Construction contracts, in these classes, were from 40 to 45 per cent higher in January and February than over before in those months, he said, adding the assertion that the total for the year "seems assured to be larger than in 1929."

Going on to an analysis of credit conditions, Mr. Hoover said that money rates have decreased steadily since December with the result that an increasing number of bond issues have been placed for the purpose of making public improvements. While loans for mortgages, home building and agriculture have lagged behind, the president foresaw an increase in money available for these purposes as a result of lessened demand upon insurance companies for loans on policies and the recent activity of the Federal Reserve board.

UPWARD TENDENCY
Secretary of Labor and Secretary Davis, in their joint statement, asserted that the forces of recovery were steadily gaining strength. Although not fixing the extent of unemployment in specific figures, they estimated it at between one-third and one-half of that which existed during the depression of 1921 and 1922.

A sub-committee of the senate commerce committee will open hearings on Tuesday or Wednesday for the purpose of formulating legislation for enactment at this congress in connection with the situation to stabilize labor conditions for the future. Chairman Johnson of the committee said today that the inquiry would be short and "strictly factual." Among the first witnesses will be Secretary Davis, Miss Frances Perkins, New York state industrial commissioner and John M. Andrews, legislative representative of the federated trades.

Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, the author of three measures which will form the basis of the hearings, is prepared to present other witnesses who, he said, "will not give mere speeches, but will direct their counsel toward a permanent remedy."

Johnson said he did not endorse the Wagner proposals in advance of the hearings, but hopes that out of the testimony given in connection with them "some definite plan" may be evolved. Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, joined Johnson in hoping that legislation of this nature might be approved before congress adjourns.

The administration public buildings bill, providing for an expansion of government construction will be pressed by Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, as soon as the senate is finished with the tariff bill. It has been approved by the house.

Formal Functions Precede Washington Lenten Season

BY SALLIE V. H. PICKETT
Washington — (P) — Formal functions for members of the diplomatic corps headed the capital's society calendar this week, the last before the annual curtailment of social activities.

The ambassador of Italy, Nobile Giacomo de Martino, and Nobile Donna Antoinette de Martino entertained 200 guests at a musicale and thirty-five or forty at a dinner party Wednesday night. Speaker Longworth and Senator and Mrs. Frederic C. Walcott of Connecticut, guests from the house of representatives, the diplomatic corps and unofficial society dined before the musicale.

Another formal dinner was at the Spanish embassy, when Senor Don Alejandro Padilla Y Bell and Senora Dona Carmen de Padilla gave a party with the ambassador of Germany and Madame von Prittwitz as their ranking guests. Senators, representatives and diplomats were in this company.

Numerous other functions, including a musicale attended by three or four hundred guests in Mrs. Henry F. Dimock's ball room, bridge and luncheon parties and teas filled out the week's activities, particularly during the days preceding the opening of Lent Wednesday.

EIELSON'S FATHER RECEIVES HIS BODY

Two Dead Fliers to Be Taken to Seward and Thence to Seattle

Fairbanks, Alaska — (P) — Alaska bade farewell today to Carl Ben Eielson, the man who abandoned a prospective career and became the flying hero of the Arctic.

The bodies of the famous flier and his mechanic, Earl Borland, borne in a cabin plane with funeral drapes, reached here yesterday from Ruby, Alaska, marking the end of the long, cold flight from North Cape, Siberia, where Eielson and Borland crashed to their deaths last Nov. 9 while on a flight from Teller, Alaska to the motorboat Nansen, icebound off the Siberian coast.

Ole Eielson, father of the flier, was at the landing field to meet the aerial cortege and receive the body of his son. The elder Eielson warmly greeted his son's flying buddies who labored so long to locate the wreckage of the Eielson-Borland plane.

The cabin plane containing the bodies was first to land, being followed quickly by the two others making up the cortege. The three planes contained virtually all of the aviators who participated in the long search. Ed Young and Joe Crosson were at the controls of the cabin plane, and were accompanied by Sam Macauley, a Canadian mechanic.

Maverick Slipenov, Russian commander, who directed the work of recovering Eielson's and Borland's bodies, flew one of the planes, accompanied by Fabio Fabre, a mechanic. Harold Gilliam, who with Crosson was first to sight the plane wreckage, piloted the third plane, with him were Captain Pat Reid and William Hughes, Canadian fliers.

Arrangements were made to send the bodies, accompanied by the elder Eielson and Mrs. Borland, to Seward by rail. From there they will go to Seattle by steamer.

FRENCH FLOOD TOLL LIKELY TO EXCEED 500

Many Millions of Dollars Damage Done by Waters in Stricken Region

Toulouse, France — (P) — Stimulated rather than discouraged by the magnitude of the task which becomes hourly more apparent to them, the population of the stricken French flood regions are setting rapidly and intelligently about the task of repairing damage wrought by the Garonne and its tributaries.

Loss of life in the flood disaster, it now appears, will run well over the previous high estimates of 500, with Moissac, where 150 perished, the hardest hit of the towns. Property damage will aggregate many millions of dollars. Thousands are homeless where a week ago was one of the happiest, healthiest sections of southern sunny France.

At Montauban, where 10,000 out of 28,000 inhabitants are without shelter, housing was the first problem faced by municipal authorities, who made a rapid survey of damaged houses in the town. Those capable of repair were taken in hand at once by contractors.

By almost superhuman efforts the electrical power plant was put into commission again, but it will be two months before the gas plant can work and there is no drinking water from the usual sources. Detachments of military engineers from Perpignan and Versailles are on their way to aid in the work of reparation.

MAKE LONG DETOUR

At Villeneuve, on the Agout river, rescue workers with provisions had to detour nearly 20 miles to get from that part of the city on the right bank of the Agout to that part of the left, since not only the big bridge there but also those at Magdeleine, Leyrac and Mirepoix were swept away.

If in the department of the tarn the loss of life was light—there were only four dead there—damage to property was immense. Half the department, notably the regions of Lavour, Castres and Mazamet, was covered with the flood water. Weaving and spinning mills and leather and dressing factories were swept away and the power plants along the river disabled.

Mazamet alone had an annual turnover of more than a billion francs and the chamber of commerce estimates provisionally the damage at a hundred millions of francs. The work of restoration here will require time as well as money. Thousands of flood victims will be forced to remain in idleness for weeks until factories are rebuilt and reconstituted.

President Doumergue and Premier Tardieu today were touring the devastated regions. Everywhere two executives have found their reception a sad one, with committees of welcome building up no arches, hanging up no electric lights and flying no flags except those at half-mast in mourning for the dead.

HE WAS LIFELESS AND DESPONDENT

But ALL-BRAN made him wide-awake and well—doctor prescribed it

CONSTIPATION ruins hopes, saps strength. Yet thousands of sufferers have found the way to relieve and prevent this disease. Read how this man rid his system of constipation.

"During the three years before ALL-BRAN entered me, I experienced more embarrassing moments than I care to tell of. Being listless, dull, lazy and despondent, I could not keep my job. My friends didn't want my company and I was tired of being asked 'What in the world is the matter with you?' After spending much money for treatment, I finally found a doctor who advised me to eat ALL-BRAN three times a day. I did this for three months and I didn't need to be told that I had better. I felt better and acted better. I am still using ALL-BRAN every morning and have no trouble now whatever." (Name and address upon request.)

Guard against constipation by eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to prevent it—to relieve it. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal. Far better than habit-forming drugs and pills.

ALL-BRAN is 100% effective. Doctors recommend it because it promotes natural elimination. Serve it with milk or cream. Use it in cooking—muffins, bread, etc. Delicious recipes on the package. Grocers sell it. Restaurants, hotels, dining-cars service it. Made by Kellogg & Battle Creek.

WRISTON REVIEWS FOREIGN POLICIES OF UNITED STATES

Lawrence President Describes Diplomacy of American Government

The Foreign Policy of the United States since the World war was discussed in a lecture by Henry M. Wriston, president of Lawrence college, in Main hall last night. The speech covered all major American diplomatic maneuvers in the last decade and included such topics as The League of Nations, The World Court, reparations, war debts, and disarmament.

"The world is still in a condition of convalescence," Wriston pointed out in discussing the abnormal international situation produced by the war. He brought out that America stood in a position more detached from the oppression of war than the other strong belligerents and that our detachment was shown in our war aims. That the United States senate so frequently refused to work with the president in power during the last ten years, Wriston considered regrettable, and Hardings plea for "normalcy" could not at the time be considered a reality.

RECOGNIZE RUSSIA
Discussing the period in general, the speaker covered the false idea of "isolation" pointing out that such a policy runs counter to physical, economic and political facts. The policy of recognizing countries newly founded upon the ruins of old nations was covered historically and the present American reluctance to recognize Soviet Russia, was severely criticized by the speaker.

In regard to the League of Nations Dr. Wriston questioned the statement made by Harding during his term that the league was dead. The fact that the United States sends observers to the league meetings was pointed out as an American admission that the league is not dead. "The sponsors of the League regarded

APPLETON DRIVERS PAY $1,432,887 FOR GAS IN 1929

7,164,439 Gallons of Gasoline Purchased in City Last Year

Appleton motorists paid $1,432,887.50 for gasoline during 1929, according to statistics submitted by M. H. Vander Hyden, Menasha, deputy assessor of the district No. 13, included in Mr. Vander Hyden's district are Appleton, Kaukauna, Menasha, Black Creek, Seymour, Shiocton and Hortonville.

The report shows that 7,164,439 gallons of gasoline were consumed in Appleton in 1929, an increase of about 100,000 gallons over 1928 when 7,069,328 gallons were used. The amount which Appleton paid for gasoline in 1929 was arrived at by figuring gasoline at an average of 20 cents per gallon, without the state tax.

At two cents per gallon, Appleton paid $143,288.75 of the state gasoline tax. The amount spent for gasoline in Appleton exceeds by more than $600,000 the total cost of the city government which was $806,203.29.

Based on an average of 15 miles of travel per gallon of gasoline it is shown that cars which used the gasoline purchased in Appleton traveled 107,466,585 miles.

Mr. Vander Hyden's report also shows that $86,856 gallons of kerosene were consumed in the city in 1929, a decrease from 1928, when 597,032 gallons were used.

NEENAH LARGE USER

Neenah used the next largest amount of gasoline among the cities in Mr. Vander Hyden's district. His report shows that city used 1,052,772 gallons of gasoline, but only 187,075 gallons of kerosene. Figures for Neenah for 1929 were not available.

Following is a report showing the number of gallons of gasoline and kerosene used by other cities in Mr. Vander Hyden's district in 1928 and 1929:

Kaukauna, 1928, 650,111 gallons gasoline, 304,269 gallons kerosene; 1929, 678,654 gallons gasoline, 465,051 gallons kerosene.

Menasha, 1928, 912,767 gallons gasoline, 139,615 gallons kerosene; 1929, 842,211 gallons gasoline, 143,687 gallons kerosene.

Shiocton, 1928, 106,396 gallons gasoline, 29,392 gallons kerosene; 1929, 96,448 gallons gasoline, 21,022 gallons kerosene.

Seymour, 1928, 603,992 gallons gasoline, 155,839 gallons kerosene; 1929, 566,006 gallons gasoline, 138,785 gallons kerosene.

Black Creek, 1928, 388,551 gallons gasoline, 68,703 gallons kerosene; 1929, 388,288 gallons gasoline, 82,653 gallons kerosene.

Hortonville, 1928, 326,816 gallons gasoline, 47,102 gallons kerosene. 1929, 317,116 gallons gasoline, 61,914 gallons kerosene.

Mr. Vander Hyden said that recently he had received many complaints of violations of the state red can law. He said that dealers claim that competitors have been selling gasoline in milk bottles and in other containers in distinct violation of the state law which makes it a crime to sell this liquid in any other container except red ones.

FINE IS $1,000

The law provides a penalty of a fine not to exceed $1,000 for violations of this chapter and Mr. Vander Hyden said that arrests will be made.

STATE COMMITTEE TO HOLD MEET HERE ON INSURANCE LAWS

Appleton Is One of 44 Cities in State Where Hearings Will Be Held

One of fourteen hearings, scheduled by the Wisconsin legislature committee investigating the fire insurance situation in the state, will be held at the courthouse in Appleton on March 18 according to word received by John E. Hantshel, county clerk, from H. E. Boldt, Milwaukee, chairman of the committee.

Other hearings in state are scheduled as follows: April 21, La Crosse; April 22, Eau Claire; April 23, Rice Lake; April 24, Superior; April 25, Rhineland; April 26, Stevens Point; May 12, Fond du Lac; May 13, Appleton; May 14, Green Bay; May 15, Sheboygan; May 16, Racine; May 16, Kenosha; May 17, Janesville; June 4, Milwaukee.

In his letter Mr. Boldt points out that anyone interested in fire insurance in the state is invited to attend this meeting to express his views. The committee's purpose, he explains, is to make a complete investigation with the purpose of recommending to the legislature needed changes in the insurance laws, which have not been changed since 1917. The committee is to report in 1931.

The views of the fire insurance companies have been secured by the committee which now seeks the views of the citizens and for this purpose the state meetings are being scheduled.

NEED HELP

Policyholders can tell the committee many of things it wants to know. Mr. Boldt says. As an aid to the policyholders to help them in securing the information which the commission wants the following questions have been prepared by the committee:

Have policyholders experienced any difficulty in getting the fire insurance coverage they wanted?

Have difficulties been experienced in securing adjustments for fire losses because policy provisions are deceptive or technical?

Are there any complaints relative to there not being enough classifications of fire insurance risks?

In your opinion, are fire insurance rates fair and reasonable?

Are there any rules of the Wisconsin Insurance Bureau and the fire insurance companies which occasion hardships on policyholders?

Is the name of the rating bureau maintained by the insurance companies, the Wisconsin Insurance Bureau, misleading in view of the fact that the state government is not represented on this bureau?

Have complaints been made about

MORE QUESTIONS

The committee also would like from policyholders and organizations to which they belong, their views regarding changes in the law. In this connection the following list of questions was prepared:

Should the present system of fixing insurance rates be retained without change?

Should there be substituted for the present rating law, a system such as prevails in Iowa, under which the fire insurance companies are permitted to maintain advisory rating bureaus but are not required to apply to such bureau nor to write at the rates established by them, thus allowing competition in rates?

Should the town mutuals and the so called "New England" mutuals writing sprinklered risks, be compelled to belong to the rating bureau and to write insurance at the rates fixed by them?

Should the state government and the policyholders be represented on the rating bureaus?

Should the insurance companies be required to keep detailed records upon their experience by classes, communities and risks and should the state insurance department be given an increased appropriation to enable it to keep a constant check upon the reasonableness of fire insurance rates?

Should public hearings be required before any changes in rules of the rating bureau affecting insurance rates may be put into effect?

Should the commissioner of insurance be given power to make such changes in existing insurance rules and regulations as he deems necessary in the public interest, after public hearings and subject to court review?

Should the law define what is to be regarded as a reasonable rate?

Should the standard fire insurance policy in use in this state be liberalized, and if so, in what respects?

Is it desirable that owners be required to stand small fire losses themselves, not exceeding, say 5 per cent of the insured value, it being taken for granted that his would result in a very material reduction in fire insurance rates?

Should a knowledge of insurance, to be shown by examination of experience, be made a prerequisite before any one may engage in the business of a fire insurance agent?

The questions, Mr. Boldt says, are merely suggestive and many other ideas are expected to be brought at the state meetings which will enable the committee to compile the information it needs.

Two New Serials Stir Interest!

"Emperor of America" to Appear Daily

Thrilling Story by Sax Rohmer in Daily Journal

Any story by Sax Rohmer is certain to thrill and please—in "Emperor of America" this brilliant author rises to new heights of drama and suspense. Beginning Wednesday, Mar. 12, "Emperor of America" will be brought to readers of the daily and Sunday Milwaukee Journal, plunging them into the stirring action of a desperate hunt for a band of master criminals.

Commander Drake Roscoe of the United States navy is repeatedly frustrated in his attempts to capture the members of the elusive "Zones" gang, whose operations run into millions of dollars and reach out like the web of a spider, ensnaring the country's leading financiers and politicians. Suspects are watched, searches are conducted and suspicions centered, all to no avail. But the desperate man hunt goes tenaciously on—to a climax of mountain high suspense.

As you read "Emperor of America" you will see the delicate hand of a famous duelist as he weaves intricate and nefarious plots for the operatives of the "Zones" to perform. You will trace the master devilry of the "Head Center" and "Great Head Center" as they hold and direct the nation-wide campaign of crime. But their identities will be hidden from you, as they were from Commander Roscoe, taking you into a labyrinth of secret caves, into chambers of inquisitorial horror. Here is a glamorous suspense story that from the first word to the last thrills with action and mystery, with surprises and adventure. You'll like "Emperor of America," to appear in the daily and Sunday Milwaukee Journal, beginning Wednesday, Mar. 12—its Sax Rohmer at his best.

Boy Slayer Of Deputy Sheriff Facing Murder Charge

BUT OFFICIALS MAY AGREE ON LESSER COUNT

Gottfried Bay Be Tried Under Children's Code of Wisconsin, Report

Monroe—(P)—Gottfried Bay, 17-year-old Footville boy who confessed slaying Deputy Sheriff Fred Jordan of Monticello, today was charged with first degree murder.

The warrant was issued last night by District Attorney Bruce M. Blum who said a circuit court hearing would determine if the charge might be lessened and the boy would be tried under the children's code.

The youth waived preliminary hearing and was bound over to the circuit court.

Gottfried still maintains his pose of innocence as he sat in the county jail today while officials debated what should be done with him.

Gottfried, a frail, bespectacled youth, said he stole a car and drove to Monticello early yesterday, where he searched for the officer. Jordan, he said, took him to his car and started to search the car, and he started to shoot him. He said he saw the youth drawing another gun and shooting the officer twice, he said.

CONFESSED SLAYER IN FUTILE SUICIDE EFFORT

Knoxville, Iowa—(P)—Less than four hours after he confessed slaying Peter Donkersloot, 72-year-old perisher, Iowa, reclus, William (Big Chief) Greenhalgh, 35 year old miner, attempted to end his own life with a razor blade he had apparently smuggled into jail in his clothing.

Marshall Bert Conroy, investigating early today why lights in the jail were extinguished, found Greenhalgh slumped beside his cell cot, unconscious from loss of blood. He had slashed his throat with a razor.

Physicians who attended Greenhalgh said he probably would recover but that his condition was serious.

Although Greenhalgh had told officers that he was alone with Donkersloot in the reclus's shack at Pershing, mining town near here, when he struck the aged man because he "got mad at him," the authorities planned to question two other arrested accomplices.

They are Henry Hunt, brother-in-law of Greenhalgh, and Lloyd Crotty. Both were said by officials to have been at Donkersloot's place shortly before the murder. Greenhalgh, officers said, had been a frequent visitor at the shack and had been on friendly terms with Donkersloot, helping him occasionally with chores.

County Attorney DeRous expected to file charges today against Greenhalgh, who confessed to killing Donkersloot by hitting him over the head with a stove poker, officers said.

Gay Frolics Mark End Of Society's Winter Season

BY ADELAIDE KERR
New York—(P)—The final fashionable frolic before Lent has kept New York's smart folk playing at a gay pace this week.

The Mardi Gras ball, the black and gold frolic at the Casino and a procession of weddings, perfumed by spring flowers and colored by pastel shades headed the festivities. And between times the fashionables devoted themselves to concerts, theatre parties, luncheons and teas galore.

The Mardi Gras ball—the last big soiree of the winter season—drew hundreds of the smart folk to the Plaza on the eve of Shrove Tuesday for the frolic given in aid of the Russian Charity Society, Inc. The tables at which the debutantes were festooned with colored streamers and filled with serpentine and confetti while the guests tossed over the dancers.

Russian classic dances a ballet dance by Miss Lania Nestor, a buffet russe served under the direction of Princess Schmitz and a modern fashion show in which debutantes displayed the spring mode were highlights of the fete.

Princess Dmitri, Prince Paul Chavichadze, Prince Alexis Obolensky and Baron Tabue were among the Russians who served on the ball committee, while the patronesses included Princess Serge, Obolensky and Mrs. Vincent Fox.

SUPREME COURT ORDERS NEW TRIAL IN ACCIDENT SUIT

Opinion Says Testimony of One Witness Was Erroneously Admitted

A new trial has been ordered by the supreme court in the case of Mrs. Tillie Schabo, versus the Wolf-Pepper Transportation company, Eau Claire, according to an opinion received here Saturday morning.

This case was tried before Judge Edgar V. Werner in circuit court and a jury awarded Mrs. Schabo damages of $5,500. The verdict was set aside by Judge Werner who held that the evidence, showed Henry Schabo, husband of the plaintiff, was guilty of contributory negligence in the accident which caused his death.

The supreme court, in its opinion, said the evidence was very close on both sides but the reason it was ordering a new trial was because the evidence of a witness who had taken a "lying statement" from Mr. Schabo had been admitted and should not have been. In this statement the witness said Mr. Schabo told him the accident would not have happened if the truck driver had not been taking more than his share of the road.

The supreme court pointed out that the testimony of a witness of this kind was admissible only in homicide cases and it decided the case should be tried again before a jury which would not hear that testimony.

Schabo died following a collision between his automobile and a truck owned by the Eau Claire company on Highway 11 near the county asylum in May, 1928.

LA FOLLETTE WANTS TO GET ON JOINT TARIFF COMMITTEE

Says He Is Entitled to Berth Because of "Coalition" in Senate

BY RUBY A. BLACK
Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent

Washington—Having won their fight for the appointment of Senator Robert M. La Follette Jr. of Madison to the Finance committee, Senate insurgents now are seeking to have him appointed to the conference committee which will reach the final agreement on the tariff bill.

When a bill has been passed in different forms by the two houses of congress, a conference committee is appointed, consisting of an equal number of members of the senate and of the house of representatives. The tradition is that if five members are to be appointed by each house, as in the case of the tariff bill, the three ranking majority members and the two ranking minority members of the committee concerned will be appointed.

This would mean, in the case of the tariff bill, that the Senate conference committee would consist of Senators Reed Smoot of Utah, James E. Watson of Indiana, and Samuel Shortridge of California, Republicans, and Senators Burnfield Simons of North Carolina, and Pat Harrison of Mississippi, Democrats.

THE VIEW OF THE REPUBLICAN INSURGENTS is that the bill which will come out of the senate sometime soon will not be a bill written by the majority of the senate finance committee, but a bill written by the coalition.

This view is less justified today, in view of some of the recent amendments adopted by the senate, than it was when the movement for the appointment of the Wisconsin senator to the conference committee first started quietly a week or so ago.

But since the "coalition" had considerable to do with the writing of the bill, in any case, its members feel that it should be represented by one conference, and Senator La Follette is the member of the Finance committee who has been a consistent member of the coalition.

WALSH IN FAVOR

The Democrats are divided on the question of Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, a native of Wisconsin, is in favor of the movement. This is understandable, since Senator Walsh has been a coalitionist, and since if Senator La Follette is named a conferee, he will displace Senator Shortridge and not a Democrat. As acting chairman of the Democratic senators in the absence of Senator Joseph Robinson at the London conference, Senator Walsh will hold a caucus of the Democrats to determine their wishes on the matter.

Senator Harrison, however, is opposed. He points out that the "coalition" has been, not an organization, but simply a meeting of like minds. It has never intended to meet in any way the organization or traditions of the senate. This is evidenced by the fact that the coalition could, if it had wanted to, have elected the secretary and the sergeant-at-arms of the senate, and selected the committee chairmen. It did not, and made no constitutional claim for reorganization of the senate.

Senator Watson, Republican floor leader, professes to favor the move. If Senator La Follette is appointed to the conference committee, he points out, then the coalition, not the Republican party, assumes responsibility for the tariff bill, for the conference committee will then consist of five Republicans, four Democrats, and Senator La Follette—thus being evenly divided between the Republicans and the Democratic-Insurgent coalition. If a deadlock should result, and the bill never be enacted, it will then be the fault of the coalition, not of the Republicans, he argues. Normally, of course, the committee would consist of six Republicans and four Democrats, the Republicans having a clear majority.

BODIES OF 3 TAKEN FROM PLANE WRECK

Jimmy Doles and Companions Found Dead at Bottom of Deep Canyon

Los Angeles—(P)—Jimmy Doles, veteran of the air, and his two companions were found late yesterday in the twisted metal wreckage of their red tri-motored transport plane at the bottom of a thousand foot deep canyon, high in the snow bound San Bernardino mountains.

In the secluded charm, where death had held them secretly for 13 days, a group of grief-stricken friends scrambled down the steep walls and through the heavy timber and underbrush to find them after a weary trek through the mountains.

The searchers had no doubt what lay before them when they set out from Victorville, on the desert to the east of the mountain range, late Thursday for a few hours before Dudley Steele and Mrs. Juanita Buras, airplane pilots, had sighted the wreckage of the lost ship.

From the mute evidence the searchers found, it seemed that Doles, passenger pilot for the Western Air Express and his mates, Copilot A. W. Bieber and Steward John W. Slaton, had run afoul of a terrific windstorm while flying without passengers from Kingman, Ariz., to Los Angeles on Feb. 23.

Butted against in their heavy plane as they neared the divide of the mountain range, Doles realized the futility of attempting to reach Los Angeles and banked about, speeding for the desert to the east where he could land, as once before he had and await the passing of the storm. As he parried with the storm clouds to seek a path back of safety, he dropped too low and a wing snagged on a canyon ridge. The structure was torn off. The crippled plane dived earthward. A tremendous gust of wind caught the fuselage tossed it a hundred feet across the ridge and dropped it a thousand feet into the canyon depths.

BODIES TAKEN IN WRECK

When the searchers came upon the ship, they found it necessary to chop away the tangled metal framework to take out the bodies of Doles and Bieber. Slaton's body was extricated more easily.

Contrary to appearances from the ship, the ship had not burned. The scene of the crash is twenty-seven miles from Lake Arrowhead and is accessible only by horse and foot. Slaton's body was brought out first and Doles and Bieber's remains later. They were taken to Victorville where an inquest was ordered. The bodies will be brought here for burial.

Doles had the reputation among his flying comrades of being a "lucky pilot." Last winter he disappeared for 24 hours in the New Mexico wilds but flew in safely to Albuquerque having landed on a mountain mesa to escape a storm. He was 28 years old and is survived by a widow and a small son.

Bieber was 29 years old but experienced pilot despite his youth. He recently married. Slaton, 35 years old, is survived by a widow.

Young Robber Critically Shot After Bank Holdup

Second Loots Another Bank in Iowa and Makes Escape With $2,500

Des Moines, Iowa—(P)—A youthful robber, who held up the Winter, Iowa, State bank in order to get money to "help the folks" was in a hospital here probably fatally wounded today while another who fled from the Goodell, Iowa, State Savings bank—14 miles away—with $2,500, was sought.

William Newell, 17, who had worked on a farm near Winterset for a month, entered the Winterset bank just before closing time yesterday afternoon and grandluncheoned a revolver, forced employees to stand aside while he scooped up $2,500 in cash, and fled. A few minutes later he slipped out unnoticed and notified the sheriff's office.

Newell fled as Dale Barrus, 23, a bookkeeper emerged from the vault with a shotgun. Barrus and a fellow employee chased Newell two blocks and Newell was shot in the chest by Barrus when he turned to fire futilely at his pursuers.

1930 WHIPPET FOUR IS COMMANDING CAR

Recent Price Slash Makes Sedan Lowest-priced 4-door Sedan in World

That the interest of the public in the four-cylinder car is as strong as ever in the low priced field is indicated in the wide public acceptance of the 1930 Whippet. In the presentation of the complete Willys-Overland line at all the automobile shows held so far this year, the interest of the public in these smart cars was as marked as in any previous year.

This interest was noticeably stimulated a short time ago when the Willys-Overland Company announced a drastic price cut in the Whippet Four line, this reduction making the sedan the lowest priced 4-door sedan in the world.

Indications are that the Whippet Four, which provides the Willys-Overland organization with its coverage in the lowest priced field, will prove as popular throughout 1930 as in the nearly four years that have passed since it made its initial appearance.

The Whippet Four holds a conspicuous position in motordom. Introduced in June, 1925, it provided a revolutionary change in its price class and was admittedly years ahead of its time, not alone in price but in design, performance and engineering features. Because the Whippet was so far advanced over other cars in its price class, it was unnecessary to make any major changes in the following years, so successful was the new car. However, various refinements and minor changes were made from time to time to maintain the position it had won in the low priced field.

Many well informed men in the automobile industry declare that the remarkable success of the Whippet Four and its permanency as one of the company's leading products stand as a distinct tribute to the engineering efficiency of the Willys-Overland staff. It is pointed out that the first time the Whippet was introduced in the Whippet Four have since been adopted, not only by cars in the low priced field but by higher priced cars as well. The features which have made the Whippet an outstanding vehicle in the lowest priced field are big four-wheel brakes, full forced feed lubrication, silent timing chain, extra long springs, high compression engine, "finger-tip" control oversteer, big, roomy bodies, and unusual gasoline economy, smart lines and colors.

Hundreds of thousands of Whippet fours have been in the hands of owners since the first Whippet was introduced and have accumulated millions of miles of service. It is a notable fact that during all these years the Whippet has established a reputation for low operating and maintenance cost, bringing a new conception of economy to the low priced field.

Coupled with the Whippet Four is the Whippet Six line, which has also enjoyed a wide acceptance on the part of those buyers who prefer a six to a four. This car has likewise established an outstanding name in the field of the low priced class for performance, low operating and upkeeps expense, reliability, smartness of lines and roominess of interiors.

These two lines of 1930 Whippets, together with the new line of Willys-Sixes form the basis of Willys-Overland's complete price coverage in the low priced markets, while Willys-Knight "70-B" and the Willys-Knight Great Six completes the coverage in the medium and quality car brackets.

The Willys-Knight, Willys-Six, and the Whippet cars are sold and serviced in Appleton by Techlin-Wassman, Inc., 116 West Harris-st.

OAKLAND OFFERS FREE RIDE PLAN

Cars Will Tour Streets and Stop to Carry Passengers Who Make Requests

In order that every local resident may enjoy the thrill of a ride in the new Oakland V-type Eight and thus learn at first hand its many points of performance superiority, a unique and convenient demonstration campaign has been arranged by O. R. Kloehe, Oakland-Pontiac dealer. The local demonstration is being held in conjunction with a national Golden Rocket demonstration in which nearly 6,000 Oakland-Pontiac dealers plan to participate. It was prompted by the success of similar demonstrations at Detroit and Pittsburgh. In both cities the public responded so enthusiastically that the dealer organization decided to arrange an Oakland Eight demonstration on a national basis.

"Even the veteran motorist who has driven expensive cars will find a new experience in riding one of these Golden Rocket demonstrators," declared Mr. Kloehe. "He will encounter an entirely fresh conception of automotive performance. He will be amazed at the Oakland's ability to get away in traffic, at its dazzling pace on the open road, at its marvelous hill-climbing prowess and at its extremely smooth operation through the entire range of speed.

"Only then can he appreciate the tremendous advantage that its 85 horsepower engine affords with its ratio of one horsepower to each 37 pounds of car weight. He will enjoy the comfort of improved spring suspension and the luxury of new Fisher bodies. This demonstration may be obtained either by signaling the driver of a passing Golden Rocket at Oakland or by calling at the phone."

Both Have Universal Appeal

The Viking Eight receives the seal of approval from "Miss Universe," otherwise Dorothy Britton of Earl Carroll's "Vanties," who has been pronounced the most beautiful girl in the world. The beauty of appearance and performance of the Viking won the admiration of Miss Britton.

100,000 MILES IS STANDARD OF REO

This Car Is Made for Service as Well as Beauty, President Writes

The Winberg Motors Inc., local Reo distributors for Reo Passenger cars and speedwagons, recently received a letter from the Reo Motor Car Co., written over the signature of Richard H. Scott, president. The subject of the letter is "The Refuge of Weakness" which is as follows: "Most of you who are reading this will not remember those cradle days of the motor car when a buyer's chief question was: 'Will it run?'"

For it did not take automobile manufacturers long to erase that query from the public's mind. The best brains and resources of the industry developed the motor car to such a point that people now say: 'They're all good now. They'll all take you three and bring you back.' But this very confidence in the motor car can be a boomerang to the public. It can provide a refuge for weakness.

What do we mean by that? Simply this. Automotive engineering advances rapidly. But all manufacturers are not equally progressive in advancing with it. Furthermore, all manufacturers do not give the same devotion to building cars that will be as fine as possible in every detail. There are cars that can give their best for only one year—there are cars that can give their best for many years. Yet, because the public accepts and approves the motor car in general, it is possible for the manufacturer of a poor automobile to trade upon confidence that the scrupulous manufacturers have created.

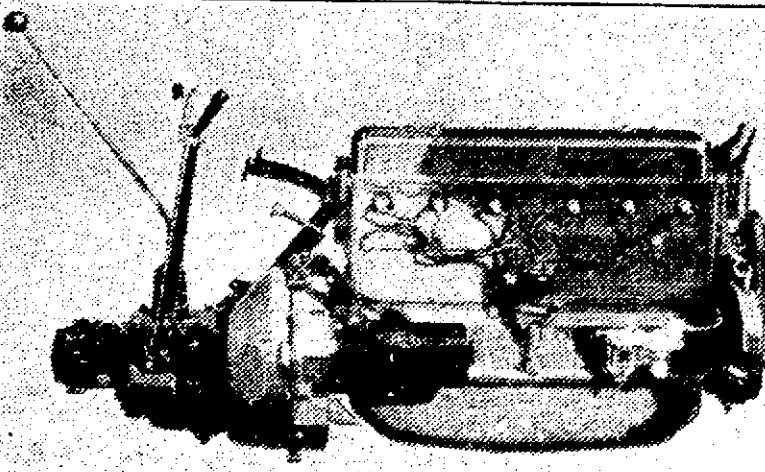

This is no new story in the world. Let any man in any field of endeavor create something of superlative goodness and win for it the confidence of the public and there will be a host of lesser men who will trade upon that confidence. The shadow of the strong has always been a refuge for the weak.

This refuge is made doubly easy by the present-day craze for "style" in motor cars. A manufacturer, no matter how cheaply constructed his car may be, can make that car good-looking. Then, by focusing the buyer's attention upon surface beauty, he can cover up the skimping in quality that lies underneath. But there are evidences that the automobile buyer is beginning to demand something more for his money than surface beauty. He is beginning once more to look under the hood. Beautiful lines he still wants of course. But he also wants a car that will perform as smartly as it looks—and will keep on performing that way for a long, long time. Nor is that all. The American automobile buyer is beginning to tire of radical yearly model changes that outmode cars still mechanically sound.

In short the motor car buyer is demanding performance and beauty room where additional cars will be available.

The local demonstration is being held in conjunction with a national Golden Rocket demonstration in which nearly 6,000 Oakland-Pontiac dealers plan to participate. It was prompted by the success of similar demonstrations at Detroit and Pittsburgh. In both cities the public responded so enthusiastically that the dealer organization decided to arrange an Oakland Eight demonstration on a national basis.

Added Power in 1930 Chevrolet

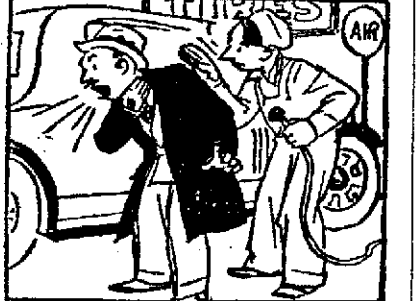

Five years of testing have resulted in the introduction in its 1930 car of the smoothest, quietest and most powerful motor ever offered by Chevrolet. It is fully enclosed with a non-deionating head. At 2,600 revolutions per minute it develops 50 horsepower. This picture of the right side of the motor shows the gasoline pump and filter, the positive water pump, the starter and distributor.

DON'T THROW AWAY YOUR VALVE CAPS

Practice Often Results in Slow Leaks in Tires, Motorists Warned

The motorist who swallowed the valve cap—and survived very little the worse for wear—at least had the right idea. He was determined not to lose it.

Tire experts from the Appleton Tire Shop declare that motorists who blantly throw away the valve caps of their tires are throwing away a lot of good mileage at the same time. It's the "slow leak" which kills good mileage at the same time. It's the "slow leak" which kills good rubber, because an under-inflated tire wears twice as fast as one which is kept precisely at the pressure recommended by the manufacturer. And the valve mechanism unprotected by its cap is almost certain in time to develop such a leak.

During the inflation of a tire the valve plunger, which is a little mechanism within the stem, serves as an air lock; but it is the valve cap, which should be screwed on tightly, which serves as a secondary air seal when the tire is being used. Consequently, valve caps should never be discarded and they should be replaced at the earliest possible moment. If a valve cap is lost, the valve inside itself should be promptly replaced if a leak is even suspected, and since their cost is negligible, it is a good rule to install new ones in all five tires every two or three months.

According to the Miller Tire Co., "Underinflation is the direct cause of more than 80 per cent of all premature tire failures." Lucky valves represent one cause of under-inflation. Failure to test tires regularly with the tire gauge is another. It is estimated that if the average motorist would use his tire gauge faithfully, at least once a week, and refrain from throwing his valve caps away, he would add from a thousand to four thousand miles to his tire mileage—and subtract a considerable sum from his annual tire bills.

that will last—not for one short year or so—but for two, three, four years and even more, if he wants to keep the car that long.

Reo is happy to note this trend on the part of the public. Reo has never neglected style, but Reo has never, in the 26 years of its history, built to a price. In the very beginning, Reo set for itself one rigid standard—from which Reo has never wavered. That standard is to make Reo good for 100,000 miles—to make a car you will enjoy driving and be proud to drive for a full 100,000 miles.

SEE INCREASE IN CAR, TRUCK SALES

Employment Is Changing in Right Direction, Dodge Officials Point Out

Four significant events that have taken place within the past few days are interpreted by C. W. Matheson, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers, as tangible evidence that business conditions in the United States have actually reached the point where the automotive industry may definitely count upon a larger volume of business during the coming year than was transacted during 1929. This applies he says to all branches of the business—passenger cars, trucks and buses.

The four factors upon which Mr. Matheson bases his conclusions are: 1. Assurance from Robert F. Lamont, secretary of commerce, that public construction throughout the country during the coming year will reach the record total of approximately $7,000,000,000.

2. The report from the Department of Labor that for the first time since last fall the tide of employment has changed in the right direction.

3. Increases in production schedules announced by Dodge Brothers and other automobile manufacturers, reflecting increasing buying by the public.

4. Optimistic reports of local business conditions accompanied by additional orders from automobile dealers in every section of the country.

"The business history of the United States for more than a quarter of a century shows plainly that when the building and automobile industries start simultaneously on enlarged programs, general business is likewise good," said Mr. Matheson.

"Complete reports from the governors of 26 state and partial reports from 22 states indicate that President Hoover's appeal for increased public construction will result this year in work reaching the $7,000,000,000 total. This figure does not include residential, commercial and industrial structures and other private operations which last year totaled more than $3,000,000,000.

"Reports from automobile manufacturers announcing increased production schedules were made public at almost the same time that the encouraging figures pertaining to public construction emanated from Washington.

"The steadily indicated progress that automobile sales will increase steadily during 1930.

"The significance of improved employment conditions needs no explanation.

"Add to these factors the optimistic reports from old, established dealers representing every section of the country and there is painted for 1930 one of the brightest pictures of sales prospects that the automotive industry has ever looked upon.

"Dodge Brothers dealer enthusiasm is never discounted in the automobile industry, because in every community these dealers are recognized as progressive, dependable business men, capable of appraising local business conditions accurately."

6 CYLINDER CARS LEAD OTHER TYPES

Sixes Comprise More Than 50 Per Cent of Registrations for First Time

For the first year in the history of the automobile, six cylinder cars led all other types during the twelve months of 1929, according to a survey conducted by the Chevrolet Motor Company.

Registrations of sixes for the year just closed comprised more than 50 per cent of the registrations of all types of passenger cars, according to the Chevrolet Statistical department, a compilation based on registrations for the first ten months—the latest available figure—plus the estimate for the remainder of the year. Actual figures for ten months totaled 225,000 registrations of all makes of passenger cars, of which 260,500 were sixes.

In the early days of the industry—the total annual output was confined to the old "one-lunger" type. Later the two-cylinder cars dominated the volume field, and latterly four cylinder models comprised the major portion of each year's output.

STEERING FEATURES NEW OLDSMOBILE

Full Sensitivity, Ability to Stand Hard Blows, Characterizes Mechanism

Full sensitivity that responds to a touch at one end and ability to absorb hard blows at the other end constitute the two contrary characteristics of the new Oldsmobile steering mechanism. These two diametrically opposite features have been made possible by a worm and sector arrangement of steering gears.

One of the first steering gears of an automobile—such as was used on the Oldsmobile 20 years ago—was a hand lever hooked to the wheels by a cross bar. Each movement of the lever was transmitted direct to the front wheels of the car. Later this tiller lever arrangement was changed, for convenience, by a slanting steering column surmounted by a hand wheel. Gears of various types have been introduced to make steering easier as automobiles have been improved.

The direct hook-up steering mechanism of the early automobiles had many disadvantages. The slightest movement of the hands was transmitted to the wheels and conversely, every time the wheels struck a stone or road irregularity the blow was telegraphed full force to the driver's arms. The result was inequality in the blow was telegraphed full force to the driver's arms. The result was laborious driving at best.

With the new Oldsmobile steering mechanism this labor is taken from the driver's arms by gears operating on roller bearings. There is a slight pay in the mechanism which relieves the necessity of a tense hold on the steering wheel. When a turn is being made, a slight pressure turns the wheel a half revolution or more, as required and requires multiply this power to turn the wheels.

These gears also perform a reverse function. When the wheels of the car strike a stone or an unequal spot on the road their natural tendency is to turn. This twisting force is transmitted to the gears which absorb the blow and hardly a perceptible quiver reaches the steering wheel.

The Oldsmobile steering mechanism is actuated by a worm working on roller bearings and operating a three-toothed sector. Both worm sector are of steel and the face of the worm is copper plated to provide additional smoothness of operation. In addition to steering ease and the elimination of road shocks, the mechanism provides complete freedom during sharp turns and when parking.

The Oldsmobile "6" and the Viking "8" are sold and serviced in Appleton by the Berry Motor Car Co., located at 742 West College Ave.

BUICK PLANT IS IMPRESSIVE SIGHT

Engineering Department Amazes Most Visitors at Factory

Few divisions of the Buick Motor Company at Flint, Michigan, are as strikingly impressive to the visitor as the engineering department. Many other departments, like the forge plant, the assembly line, and the sheet metal building are more spectacular because of the mass of machines and the giant hammers and stamps that roar within their walls, but in the engineering department the visitor feels conscious of the careful craftsmanship on which Buick has built its reputation.

There are about 500 men employed in the Buick engineering department, including a big staff of automotive engineers, many of whose names are well known in the engineering profession both here and abroad. These are the men who originate, design and perfect the advancements that are built into the car year after year.

Working under the engineers is a corps of mechanical draughtsmen who occupy a large section on the top floor of the engineering building. From morning to night these men, some two score of them, are kept busy laying out the designs for suggested improvements and changes. Once made, these drawings are never destroyed, but are filed away as carefully as the manuscripts kept in the archives of the Congressional Library. A battery of blue-print machines supplies the necessary working copies for the production departments.

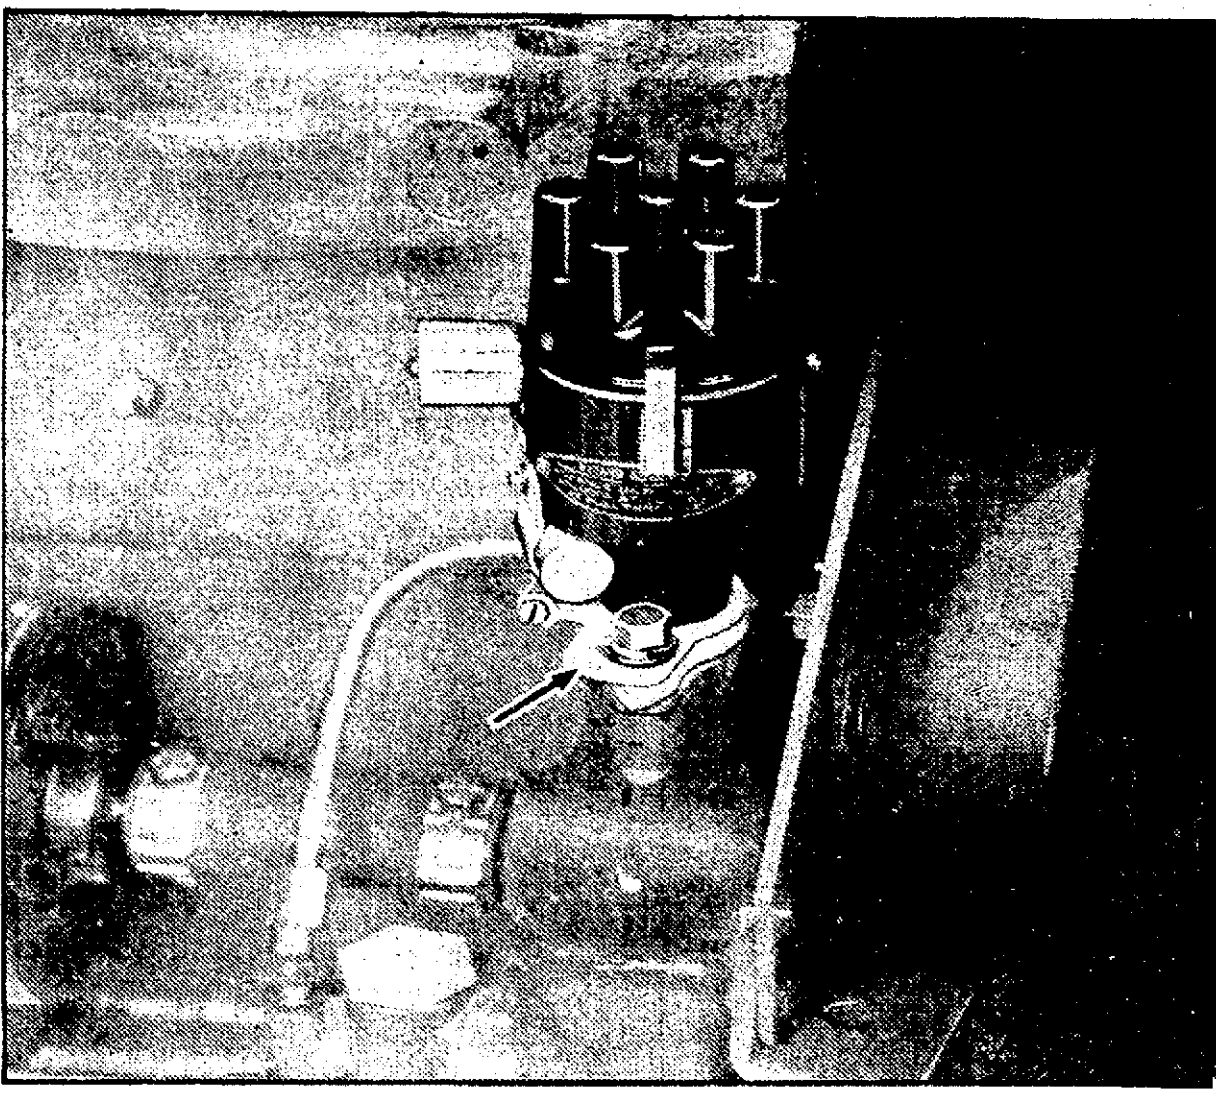

The engineering department is a self-contained unit when an experimental car is wanted to demonstrate the advisability of certain features. It is built by the engineers' mechanical staff. The men on this staff are something more than average mechanics; given the raw materials they build automobiles by hand, fashioning many of the various parts at their work benches. The sheet metal work in these experimental cars they shape up with mechanical hammers and shears. Hand-made cars are not novelty items; the engineers' some five or six of them are built every year.

The lower floor of the building is devoted to the testing rooms which are equipped with intricate and complex machines used in determining the strength and power of the various units of the experimental cars. One electrical machine on this floor tests and rates to the fraction of a pound the horsepower of the motor.

The dominant note in this section of the department is gauges—gauges to measure every conceivable dimension of engine and car.

There is one room on this floor that would make splendid training quarters for Arctic explorers—it is the cold room used to demonstrate the efficiency of motors in sub-zero temperatures. Refrigerating pipes line the ceiling and walls of this room and the test cars are rolled in through airtight doors that resemble the doors on an ice box. Inside

New Essex Timing Guide

Operating comfort of the New Essex Challenger is greatly increased by this specially graduated spark setting or timing guide. Up till the time of the introduction by Essex of this improvement, spark timing has been a job for an experienced mechanic. It required getting at the flywheel timing marks and the adjustment of the timer in conjunction with these marks. This innovation by Essex entirely eliminates all this fuss and bother. This timing guide is mounted on the distributor and permits even the most inexperienced motorist to quickly, accurately and permanently adjust the timing to meet varying driving requirements.

FORD IN 500-HOUR NON-STOP CONTEST

Model A Ford Shows Stamina in Grueling Test at Cincinnati

A 500-hour non-stop run, establishing a world automobile record for a half mile dirt track, was recently completed by Ralph Ormsby, Jr., and Henry Schlosser of Cincinnati at the Cincinnati Hamilton Speedway.

These drivers, who did not leave their Model A Ford roadster at any time in the course of the 500 hours, covered 11,540 miles.

The previous automobile record for a half mile dirt track was four hundred and forty hours. Ormsby and Schlosser also surpassed the motorcycle record of 490 hours. The run was started November 12 at 8:25 p. m., and was finished December 3 at 4:25 p. m. The average speed was 35 miles an hour.

"During this run," the drivers wired to the Ford Motor company at Detroit, "we put the Ford car to every sort of strain possible through all kinds of weather—mostly rain, cold and snowing. And at all times the Ford showed perfect performance."

"We believe the car could have stood another 500 hours of punishment. We feel proud to have set this new world's record with the Model A Ford."

They then admitted that it had been an endurance test for the drivers also, continuing:

"We are both feeling fine but very tired and stiff for being in the car for 500 hours."

BEWARE THE SMOKE SCREEN
On Tuesday, April 1, the voters of Appleton will determine if they are to continue their present inefficient, wasteful, antiquated aldermanic system of government or whether they will adopt the modern, efficient and business-like city manager form. The last three weeks of this campaign are of utmost importance to the people of this city.

The experiences of other cities have been presented to the voters of Appleton to prove that the city manager form offers possibilities of economies in city government that are impossible under the aldermanic system. The actual expenses of a city of comparable size and environment with the manager plan have been compared, item for item, with Appleton's expenses and the experience of Appleton appears wasteful and inefficient in the extreme by comparison.

Opponents of the city manager plan, stunned for the moment by the revelation of waste and inefficiency in aldermanic government, will attempt to answer these facts and figures by contrivances to their own purpose. There will be much talk of allowing credits and making deductions, of capital investment and of cultural improvement, all designed to confuse the public mind but proving nothing except that Appleton has been living far beyond its means and that aldermanic government has been prodigal with the taxpayers' money.

In the next three weeks the voters of Appleton will hear many excuses from the city hall for the high cost of government here. They will be told by men fighting to retain their political lives that the city was faced by extraordinary expenditures, that the subway cost a great deal of money, and that the people demand this service and they demand that thing. There will be the moth-eaten excuse of the bank tax refunds and the litigation with the county to explain the $242,000 deficit at the end of 1929. These and a lot of other excuses and alibis will be poured into the voters in the next three weeks in the effort to confuse their minds and becloud the issues.

But it will take a lot of explanation to convince Appleton people that a system of government which exceeds by $115,000 the budget set for itself is an efficient government; it will take a lot of excuses and alibis to justify a deficit of $242,000 with an expenditure of more than $750,000. It will require a great deal of eloquence and conjuring to explain why a government that owes the banks over $200,000 doesn't curtail its expenditures until it gets out of debt. It will take a lot of alibis to explain why it costs over $315,000 more to operate the city of Appleton than the city of Janesville.

Observers will note in the campaign of city manager opponent's the same old tricks and the same old artifices that always characterize campaigns of professional politicians. There will be the usual underground rumors and back-door gossip that no one will have the temerity to sponsor in public. There will be plenty of innuendoes, false charges and insinuations. There will be veiled hints that this group or that individual is favoring city manager government actuated by selfish or ulterior motives. There will be efforts made to detract attention from the fact that the city manager plan is being sponsored and backed by more than 4500 sincere citizens who have signed the petitions for the change. Smoke screens will be thrown out to hide the real issues in the campaign.

All these things can be expected in the three weeks before April 1. But the people, forewarned, know what to expect. The politicians, with their backs to the wall fighting for their political lives, will find it difficult to lull an aroused people back to sleep.

COMMUNIST FIZZLE
The "great" communist demonstration that was to be made throughout the United States Thursday of this week was as flat as a pancake. Only petty disturbances occurred here and there and they were hardly enough to gain first page notice. In Europe also the demonstrations largely fizzled out. The only capital where the Reds made a showing of disorder was Berlin, and even that did not amount to much.

On the eve of the day set for red rioting word was sent out from Moscow that capitalism in the United States was facing a crisis and that the "bloated American bourgeois" would be alarmed and amazed at the strength of the revolutionary movement these disorders would reveal. It was in fact regarded in Moscow by the commissars as a test of red strength throughout the world, but particularly in Germany, England and the United States. Millions of dollars had been spent in preparation for these demonstrations and large sums sent to the different countries. The president of the American Federation of Labor stated that he had definite knowledge of the fact that several million dollars had been sent to the United States to be expended in propaganda and for the encouragement of violence.

The results must be exceedingly disappointing in Moscow, although doubtless they will be heralded to the Russian people in an altogether different light, with accounts of police brawls magnified into conditions approaching civil war. The third international is deluding itself if it has any idea that Communism is spreading. It has had fertile opportunities to make a showing during the heavy unemployment periods in all countries since the war, but it has failed. Today the world is getting back on its feet economically and there is no possibility of communism making itself felt. Indeed, it is going to have hard work holding its own in Russia in the years to come.

Communism thrusts its appeal first upon labor. Throughout the major nations of the world intelligent and organized labor rejects it flatly. Its most implacable foe in the United States is the American Federation of Labor. In Germany it is a socialist chaplain who fights the communists and shows them no quarter when they become militant. The same is true of the labor government in Great Britain, while in France the socialists who for some years now have largely controlled the policies of that nation are 100 per cent at war with communists.

VON TIRPITZ, THE BUNGLER
The celebrated Admiral von Tirpitz, leader of the German naval forces during the World war, is dead. Thus another of the great figures of that conflict has passed from the scene of life. Germany, France, Austria, Russia, England and the United States all have lost in the last 10 years notable actors in that tragic drama.

Von Tirpitz was one of the men who helped to wreck the German cause and to make allied victory certain. His submarine warfare was too effective. It was carried to the extreme of forcing the United States to enter the war, and the moment that decision was made Germany was done for. The admiral's submarines did a great deal of damage to British commerce and were highly menacing to her communications and her food and other supplies, but in order to accomplish this his undersea warfare became so reckless and defiant as to levy its toll upon American commerce. We protested, threatened and finally issued ultimatums in vain. That is where von Tirpitz and a crazy emperor who timidly supported him were dead wrong.

If ever the hand-writing of a nation's doom was written in letters that all could see, it was when Germany gave the United States cause to declare war, in fact compelled the declaration. It was sheer madness, and whether an act of blind stupidity or an ignorant estimate of American character and resources matters little now. Any man in that day who had even a fair knowledge of world affairs and of the United States in particular should have known what was certain to happen. Von Tirpitz was not a genius. On the contrary, he was a bungler and contributed even more to the defeat of Germany than the kaiser himself.

The Post-Mortem

PERHAPS it was because we were a little sleepy, perhaps it was the fact that we sat in the side balcony and straight across the hall the walls were dusty and the radiators were pounding, perhaps it was the numerous splashes of empty seats, perhaps it was the bright house lights. But anyway, the appearance of Paul Kochanski Thursday night left us just a bit flat.

JUSTICE HOLMES' BIRTH
On March 8, 1841, Oliver Wendell Holmes, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, was born at Boston.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, in 1861, the same year he graduated from Harvard, young Holmes enlisted and served three years in the 20th Massachusetts Volunteers. He was wounded three times—at Ball's Bluff, Antietam and Fredericksburg. By the end of the war he had risen to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

In 1864 he began the study of law at Harvard and three years later was admitted to the bar. After considerable experience in the practice, writing and teaching of law, Holmes was appointed associate justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts. He occupied this position for 17 years, becoming chief justice on Aug. 2, 1889.

On Dec. 4, 1892, he became associate justice of the U. S. supreme court. As a judge, his opinions always have favored a liberal interpretation of the Constitution. He was awarded in 1924 the Roosevelt Memorial Association medal for the development of public law.

Justice Holmes' father was Oliver Wendell Holmes, famous New England poet and essayist.

KNOWLEDGE PREVENTS PANIC
Many readers will recall the disgraceful panic that swept over our public health authorities in various parts of the country when the leper Early was being hounded and persecuted by the very people who should have defied the rabble and given the unfortunate man humane protection and treatment.

We know cases of leprosy in many cities of the United States. Only a portion of the leprosy population are isolated in the leper hospital at Carville, La. It is not a very unusual thing for a physician to discover leprosy in a private, hospital or clinic patient. No one gets excited about it. Doctors have no fear of leprosy; there is nothing but cheap romance in the yarns one still hears occasionally, of the self-sacrificing courage and great charity of some doctor, nurse, or other individual, going to live among or minister to people who have this disease. It requires no more bravery than one needs to live among and minister to ordinary sick folk anywhere.

Formerly diptheria cases gave even the doctors some qualms of fear, but that was before the doctors knew precisely what caused the disease and how it was conveyed. They vaguely imagined it was somehow associated with filth, faulty plumbing or lack of plumbing, "sewer gas" and bad air. They thought it might be carried in or by the air. Especially after dark, and when it was kinda damp and chilly, you know. Such vague ideas would make any one feel fearful.

We doctors no longer entertain such ideas, but as it is only thirty years or so since we relinquished them, it is a bit too soon to expect the laity to join us heartily in laughing at our childhood notions.

Every little while a case or two of diptheria occurs in some school. If the outbreak starts a small panic the board of education is quite likely to order terror fugitation of the school room, where the cases have occurred. That's tantamount to an avowed belief that there's something bad about the atmosphere of the room or place in question. There can be no other explanation of or justification for such an absurd rite.

In the best sanitary practice, and by that I mean the measures which prove most effective in preventing the spread of disease, not only is there no fumigation (except for killing rats and vermin) but there is today practically no chemical disinfection and no necessity to employ antiseptics or germicides of any description, other than soap and water, sunshine and fresh air. You see, the more we know about disease and its causes, the less we fear it and the more effective are our measures of control or prevention.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Tonsils Must Come out AGAIN
I have been told by three different doctors that my tonsils must come out. I had them removed years ago and they left the roots and these roots have several small holes in them, and every once in a while these holes fill up with malodorous stuff which has to be squeezed out. I have heard about a new way to remove tonsils with some kind of electricity. I saw the instrument, it looks like a fountain pen. The doctor says it doesn't bleed and it sears the tonsil. He says patients do not suffer sore throat from the treatment and need not take any anesthetic or be laid up even an hour. Do you know anything about it, or would you recommend it? (Miss J. A. K.)

Answer—I assume you refer to the use of diathermy, otherwise known as electrocoagulation or electrocoagulation. Skilled physicians employ this method with great success. I had tonsils to be obliterated. I should prefer this new method to the old and comparatively crude surgical method. But there are very few physicians who have the necessary skill, patience and equipment to give patients the benefit of this modern improvement. Any doctor can snare, punch, dissect, bite or otherwise surgically remove the greater portion of the tonsils. It requires something more than ordinary ability to obliterate tonsils without disabling the patient. I regret I am not yet prepared to direct readers to doctors who are competent to treat diseased tonsils by this modern method. For I know of only an occasional skilled man here and there. But I warn readers against the little trick of the trade—too often when your medical adviser is a little backward about these newer methods he assures you that it is all baloney, just a dream, or maybe even dangerous. If that's the kind of doctor you put faith in, I'm sorry for you. I suggest he is getting a little old and obsolete. For your health's sake you ought to transfer your confidence to a younger and more capable man.

Exophthalmic Goiter
Is exophthalmic goiter and toxic goiter the same thing or two different kinds? (Mrs. L. E.)

Answer—Exophthalmic means prominent or protruding eyes. In one type of goitre such appearance of the eyes is often noticed. In some cases this would be apparent only to the skilled observer. In cases where the exophthalmos is not so obvious, some doctors fall into the slovenly habit of applying the term "toxic" instead of "exophthalmic." This habit prevails chiefly among over-ready surgeons—doctors who purport to be experts but are really just skilled operators and if I had exophthalmic goiter and heard a doctor refer to it as "toxic" I'd hurry away from his influence while my neck was all whole.

The Tynmites
By Hal Cochran

THE flock of ducks quacked all at once. It seemed to be one of their stunts, while flying gaily through the air, in one long V-shaped line. Wherever the leader went, the rest all seemed to do their very best to trail along behind him and it made a picture fine.

The Tynies, sitting in their plane, all of a sudden seemed to gain a lead upon the ducks, and then the ducks quacked louder still. "They're sure excited," Scouty said. "They hate to see us surge ahead. Each time we start to leave them far behind, they get a thrill."

Then from below they heard a shot. "Was from a hunter, like as not. The ducks were very smart. They seemed to figure danger near. Some turned to left and others right and soon they all were out of sight. "A gun," said little Coppy, "is the one thing that they fear."

"If there's a hunter down below," cried Clowzy, "I sure hope he'll know that this is not a great big bird. He might shoot straight up here. Perhaps we'd better rise up high and fade from sight up in the sky." When Miss Hutter cannot see us, there'll be naught to fear."

So Scouty said, "All right! Here goes!" And, slow, slow, but sure, the small plane rose. All of a sudden Clowzy shouted, "This is high enough. The queer air currents change, you know. No higher can we safely go. Right now the plane is jerking and the going's rather rough."

Just then they heard a sudden snap, and Coppy cried, "We're in a trap. The rubber band has broken. Our propeller's bound to stop." And sure enough, that's what it did. The plane then seemed to jerk and skid. It wasn't long until the Tynies felt the small plane drop.

(The plane lands with a smack in the next story.)

Seen And Heard In New York
BY RICHARD MASSOCK
New York—In the life of Alfred E. Smith the gubernatorial chair is a mere euphemism. Life is still using in his Madison avenue office the one he sat in while governor.

Being one of the town's big time executives, since he left Albany to become a landlord, has had little effect on Smith.

Repair men of the Edison company, which supplies Manhattan with electricity, always maintain telephone in contact with the company's office. If a crew happens to be working on some street, it arranges with a nearby store to receive any calls.

One night the office called a Fifth avenue drug store over one of its public telephones. It was answered by a man with a deep, hearty voice. "Will you call one of the Edison men working outside to the phone?" the office said.

"Sure!" replied the voice.

A moment later the office was talking to its man, who seemed a little excited. He explained that Al Smith was the one who summoned him.

BARGAIN MART
Fourteenth street is one of the cheapest shopping centers of Manhattan. It attracts bargain hunting housewives, not only from Greenwich village and the East Side, but also from the Bronx and Brooklyn.

A sale of some kind is almost always in progress in one of the motley stores. An indication of the merchandise is one of the window cards: "Hotsy Totsy Bloomers, $1.95."

The aisles are packed with women of wide proportions, who have the counters of merchandise in disarray. Frequently police have to keep the shoppers in line, as outside a movie theater, admitting only a few at one time to keep the shoving crowd in check.

Not all the women come afoot or by subway. Sometimes a town car lets out a thrifty uptowner.

The most unique store, perhaps, is that where the customers are allowed to walk on themselves. Each customer purchases a pair of shoes and takes it into a cubicle to try on. Girls are hired to sit on platforms and peer over the tops of these dressing rooms to see that nobody tries to hide a new dress beneath her old one.

VISITORS PREFERRED
Out of town people have for a champion Vincent Lopez, who says they make the best dance crowds.

The reason is that if the visitors like something they are not ashamed to show it, or even say so. In the belief that "lots of persons vibrate under certain lights just as some do to certain notes of music," Lopez plays lights on those who dance to his music at the St. Regis.

"Of course," he adds, "it sometimes seems difficult to make hard-core New Yorkers vibrate to anything. Persons who have become New Yorkers by training or habit will often go any lengths to conceal their pleasure or appreciation. It is the correct thing to appear bored."

ANNOUNCE HEARING ON FIRE INSURANCE RATES AT MADISON

Hearings of Interim Group Claim There Is No State Power Over Rates

Appleton insurance men have received word that State Senator Herman E. Bolt of Sheboygan Falls joined with Assemblyman Carlton Mauthe of Fond du Lac in calling a hearing on the recent reduction in fire insurance rates at Madison next Monday. Several local insurance men may attend.

Mr. Mauthe states that the basis of the call for the hearing is the belief that the Wisconsin Insurance Bureau, Milwaukee, which fixes fire insurance rates, is not only free of any obligation to the state but actually is controlled by forces from outside the state boundaries. The senator and assemblyman are chairman secretary of the interim legislative committee on fire insurance rates and methods.

Mr. Mauthe states that the bureau has a managing committee of nine members, of whom only two are from Wisconsin, and added that of the stock companies represented in the bureau only one is Wisconsin owned.

There are 211 stock insurance companies and 78 mutual companies in the insurance bureau, but there can be no competition between these organizations, the rate fixing system constituting almost a complete monopoly, Mauthe said.

The rates are fixed by the bureau and are sent to the insurance commissioner for approval, he stated, but while the commissioner may disapprove them, his powers end there and he has no right to dictate what rate should be adopted as fair to all concerned.

Those who have been called to the hearing on March 10 include George Jensen, Mayville; Theodore Schmidt, Kewaskum; Peter Jacobs, Stevens Point; Charles Tunkers, Milwaukee; George Jacobs, Janesville; and Milton Freedy, insurance commissioner.

The group will explain to the committee how the recent rate cut was brought about, with an account of conferences held before the announcement, exact extent of the reduction, with a showing as to what cities and what classes of risks are affected, and the basis upon which the rates were fixed, according to Mr. Mauthe.

ANYBODY MAY SHOOT STRAY DOGS DURING QUARANTINE PERIOD

Under state law, any citizen has the same privilege to shoot a dog at liberty during a quarantine period as does an officer of the law, Mayor A. C. Reile pointed out Wednesday morning after a series of telephone calls requesting the assistance of the police in enforcing the quarantine.

Mayor Reile explained that while the city has an ordinance prohibiting dogs to run loose during May, June, July, and August, it has made no provision for the enforcement of the state law. While the local officers enforce the law as much as possible, they find it difficult to answer all the calls that come into police headquarters on this matter. Therefore, Mayor Reile advises citizens to take the matter into their own hands as much as possible, as a citizen has as much right to a dog violating the quarantine as does a police officer. The state pays two dollars to any citizen shooting a dog violating the state law.

HOLD CHILD CLINIC AT HORTONVILLE

State Doctor and County Nurse Will Conduct Examinations

A child health center where pre-school children and prenatal cases will receive examination and advice will be held at the Legion hall at Hortonville on Wednesday, beginning at 9 o'clock in the morning and concluding at 4:30 in the afternoon.

The examinations will be conducted by Dr. Eleanor Hutchinson of the state board of health assisted by Miss Marie Klein, city nurse. Mrs. Jennie McMeekin, Hortonville, is chairman and will arrange appointments. Any family in the county will be accommodated at the clinic without charge, but it is expected that parents will obtain correction of defects in their children through medical or dental service.

"These health conferences," said Dr. Charlotte Culver, director of the bureau of child welfare, Madison, "are concerned mostly with the pre-school child, and the parent is urged to have all remediable defects corrected, so that when the child enters school he will be free to learn unfettered by handicaps due to physical causes. With a foundation of good health upon entering school, these children will save the community and themselves much loss of time through sickness, for it is an economic waste to spend high sums of money to educate teachers, build and equip modern schools, and then allow children to enter school handicapped by physical conditions that could be corrected."

DAILY LENTEN THOUGHT

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

Communism is the keynote of all deep and true Lenten experiences. We can never understand the Master, or enter into the fullness of His salvation and blessing, until we are willing to share His passion.

What the church calls the "Communion Service" centers around the symbols of the broken body and the life-blood poured out in sacrifice.

Perhaps the great mistake that we are making is in trying to share the sufferings of Christ before we have learned to share His life. We try to bear the cross without the preparation of His teaching, and the inspiration of His companionship; the cross is too heavy to bear and we become discouraged. But the way to the cross is a long way—a way of love and companionship, a way of discipline and prayer.

Even Christ did not meet the cross at the beginning, but at the end of the way; and even as He prayed that the cup might pass He found strength to drink of it.

He who would find Christ near in the hour of need, he who would face life with courage and bear his cross, must first of all seek to know the Master in the common things of life. When we have learned to follow Him through fields and flowers, in communion with Him we shall find

WISCONSIN RADIO HOPES GET SETBACK

Commissioner Says State Already Has More Rights Than Limit

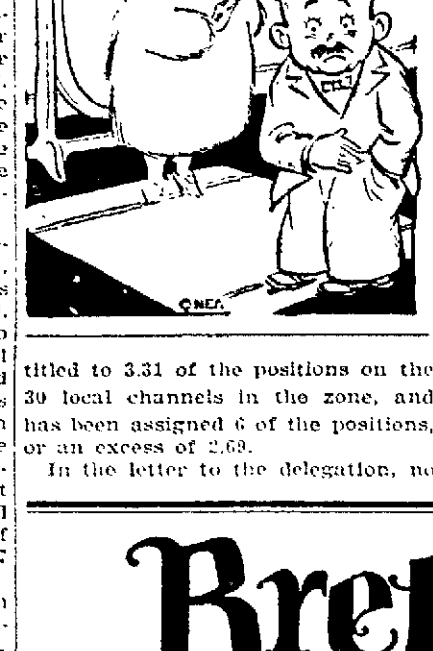

BY RUBY A. BLACK
Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent.

Washington — Hopes of the Wisconsin congressional delegation for better radio facilities for the budget state received a setback when C. McK. Saltzman, chairman of the Federal Radio commission, wrote them that Wisconsin now has more regional channels and more local stations than it is strictly entitled to under the law.

The delegation, in its brief presented to the commission on Feb. 24, asking for more regional channels and at least one cleared channel, said that Wisconsin is entitled to 2,305 of the positions on regional channels, and has been allocated only 2,160. Chairman Saltzman says Wisconsin's proportion of population in the fourth radio zone entitles the state to 11.01 per cent of the 26 regional channels; allocated to that zone, or 2.87 of the positions, and the state has been assigned 4.64 of the positions, or an excess of 1.77 positions.

As to local stations, Chairman Saltzman says that Wisconsin is entitled to follow where the way is steep and path is thorny. We learn to do the hard thing and to bear the heavy load, through first learning to do the easy things and through bearing faithfully the lighter load. (Copyright, 1930, NEA Service, Inc.)

mention was made of the request for a cleared channel, but members of the committee have intimated that Wisconsin may be entitled to a cleared channel, but that nobody has as yet applied for such a channel.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE walls were smooth. She could not tell what sort of mixture had been used to hold back the dirt that might have fallen into the room. There were no windows and now that she knew it, it seemed that she would stifle. But there was air in the room, coming from somewhere. Finally above the door, she saw a small square which she decided, served a ventilating agent. It was so high that she couldn't reach it, even when she stood on a chair. She held the lamp up.

No, she decided, it was so small she could never crawl through. Besides it was heavily grated on the inside and the glass was painted gray to give it a soiled appearance and camouflage the barriers if any chance trespasser came that way.

"Well, the stage is set and I'm the heroine," Sue mused out loud. "I might as well laugh as weep. I wonder where Sybil is."

What if the lamp went out in the night and left her alone in blackness? She sat very still. Anything could happen to her. What did they want with her? Oh, if they would only talk to her!

She did not sleep but sat, wide-eyed and waited for morning. Along about one o'clock the lamp died down and then she made a couch of the blankets, put them by the fire, which she was keeping up, and huddled into a ball.

She noticed by her wrist watch that it was seven o'clock, after what seemed a century had passed, and the inner door opened a few minutes later.

"Good morning," the woman called Nell said. "You don't look as though you slept much. Do cheer up! Maybe it won't be for long."

"Oh won't it?" Sue asked quickly. The woman seemed in good spirits this morning. Maybe she would tell her why she had been kidnapped. "Why are you holding me here?"

Immediately she grew shrewd. She shrugged her shoulders carelessly. "Why know? Ask Pete or Joe. They'll talk when they get ready."

She had a twinkle in her hand which she put down and Sue noticed that it contained a pitcher of milk, a bowl of oatmeal, even an orange and some toast that looked soggy. Evidently she was not going to starve. She discovered, too, that she was hungry.

Soon after she finished eating the two men came back. Joe, who was the man of the farmhouse, seemed to be dependent on the fat man for any procedure.

"Well, sweetheart, how did the night go?" the fat man asked with a crude attempt at joviality. Sue drew back a little.

Both men laughed delightedly. "I suppose you're wondering why we brought you here, aren't you?" Joe asked. "I guess we might as well tell her, Pete. It can't do any harm for her to know."

NEXT: Sue learns why she has been kidnapped.

DEAR FRIENDS—

A man was in the store one day this week buying his wife a birthday present. He said: "I used to congratulate her on her birthday, but now I console her!"

But that makes no difference so far as the gift is concerned. You can find exactly the right gift at Kamps Jewelry Store, always.

Just by the way of suggestion, may I mention, our Clearance Sale is now on and there are many wonderful things that would make lovely gifts. Why not buy now and save a few dollars on that birthday present?

News About New Books

Review by Eleanor Evans Wing
BURNING BEAUTY, by Temple Bailey.

Sweet, happy books are almost a relic of the gay nineties. At least, it is fatal to the popularity of a book to call it "sweet and happy." But after all, the pleasant, non-emotional stories of an earlier era do appeal to a vast reading public and for them we commend Burning Beauty by Temple Bailey, published by the Penn Publishing Company. There is nothing strong, disturbing, or vital about this novel. It will make no stir in the calm of your day, cause no ripple of unrest in your mind. Lake Gene Stratton Porter, Temple Bailey always has a happy ending to her stories. The right people love one another, and even the villain reforms.

Burning Beauty is the conflict of a girl whose unusual love for her brother battles with her desire to fling everything aside for her own happiness. Of course, she does not give in to her impulses. Beautiful Virginia Oliphant is loved by two men—gay, irresistible Tony who tempts her with his millions and steady, charming Michael who tempts her with nothing more than his devotion—although of course he has a million or two laid away which he does not mention at the beginning of the story. Besides he is a famous editor and Virginia and the weak brother together succeeded in writing the best seller—which Michael publishes. It really is fortunate that he is an editor.

Perhaps you like to read books which do not disturb your peace of mind. If so, Burning Beauty will appeal to you. Perhaps it really ought to, since it comes to light in the midst of all the modernistic problem novels of the present era, and presents a sharp contrast to its contemporaries. But the lack of surprises—even in a well bred book—is a very great drawback. From the first page, the reader can trace the whole outline of the plot, decide just how noble some of the characters will be in the decisions of living, and just how base others will turn out. Many little Victorian touches are amusing. For instance we are even treated to a tea with chaperone installed for propriety's sake. And chaperones are certainly rare and seldom seen people nowadays.

On the whole, Burning Beauty has little to commend it to the discerning reader. Perhaps in a few years, when long skirts and trailing chignons have worked their influence on the feminine gender, and modesty, reticence, white gloves and fans are again important, these books of chivalry and restraint will have their vogue. But right now, when we are trained to listen to facts; to recognize passion; to hate coquetry; to face realities, simple, uncomplicated stories seem a long way from those of real life. And Miss Biley will have to wait until the Victorian age returns for her books to achieve real popularity.

Harlem, America's negro city, was founded by Isaac De Forest, a barker under Peter Stuyvesant. His descendant, Lee De Forest, who has been called the Father of Radio broadcasting, is the man whose discoveries enable you to dance in your home to the jazz of Harlem night clubs. Dr. De Forest invented the audion amplifier and perfected the "phonofilm" to provide musical accompaniment for motion pictures. Charles A. Beard has prevailed upon Dr. De Forest to write a chapter on Communication for his forthcoming book, Toward Civilization, which will be published by Longmans, Green and Company in the spring. Dr. De Forest will take up the cudgels in behalf of the Machine Age in Toward Civilization. Among other articles by distinguished contributors will be included Machinery and the Romance of Life and the Machine Age and International Relations.

Mysterious as his own books, David Frome persistently refuses to disclose his identity even to his publishers. Longmans, Green and Company, who will publish his latest thriller, In At the Death, in the early spring, have discovered that although his books are about Englishmen in England, Mr. Frome is named by Longmans, Green and Company for the spring. Senior West fictionalizes the history of Lucia Miranda, Argentina's ideal of conjugal devotion. How a native king's passion for the golden haired Andalusian brings disaster upon the Belas-tian Cabot expedition which so bravely set out to conquer the New World makes The Strength of Love a book worthy to succeed West's other novels. Readers will recall that Black Valley and Stone Desert received the highest literary awards of Spain and Argentina.

What brand of cigarette did Elizabeth Barret Browning smoke? Alas, we cannot say, but her biographer, Louise Schutz Boas, whose book is announced on the spring list of Longmans, Green and Company, stoutly maintains that the heroine of the world's most perfect love-

PIANO CONCERT AND TALK ON ART AT M. E. VESPER

Gladys Ives Brainard, noted pianist and professor of piano at Lawrence Conservatory of Music, will present the program at the Methodist vesper service Sunday afternoon. Miss Brainard, who has served as soloist with three symphony orchestras, the Minneapolis, New York and Milwaukee symphonies, will play "E Flat Major Concerto" by Liszt, a brilliant composition which gives ample opportunity for the expression of Miss Brainard's technique and artistry. She will be accompanied at the second piano by Hudson Bacon.

HEELS FOR

INGENUITY NEEDED TO GET "SPECIAL" EFFECTS IN MOVIES

Cameraman 'Manufactures' Firmament and Stars in Half an Hour

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright 1930 by Cons. Press.
Hollywood—(CPA)—There was a hurry call today at the Pathe studio for a night sky full of stars; not big stars, but the brilliant, small kind that flick a frosty night. A wide expanse of sky, with uncountable scads of twinkling asteroids.

It didn't happen to be night, and if it had been the camera couldn't have registered such a sky scene adequately. The only stars present were in circus costume. What to do, what to do?

They buzzed a telephone in a far corner where amid an extraordinary assemblage of knickknacks there lurks William Dietz. His title, which is head of the maintenance and special effects departments, looks no more impressive than the things he can accomplish with a camera. Bill Dietz said, sure, he'd turn 'em out a ice zenith absolutely reeking with twinkles in half an hour.

They knew Dietz had once taken a shot of the Los Angeles freight yards which, when it emerged from his laboratory, proved to be a railroad camp high on the slope of isolated mountains with not an inch of Los Angeles city hall visible; an effect achieved by shooting the scene through glass blackened here and there to exclude extraneous city buildings, and then re-shooting it with painted mountains as a background.

SHOWS INGENUITY

They knew that upon occasion he had "faded" 20 unrelated scenes into a single harmonious one—by shooting and blending 20 times—and then synchronized the resultant action to music. They knew he could photograph a group of extras around a dusty roadway 30 miles from sea and transform them into dabbles on the edge of a rippling harbor. But they rather doubted whether the head of the special effects could manage a starry firmament in half an hour.

It was ready in 29 minutes, ten of which were spent in collecting a handful of silver-paper shreds, an electric fan, and a small square of cardboard. With a few swipes of a brush, Dietz painted the cardboard black. With a pinlet he punched it full of tiny holes. With a touch of glue he affixed the silver-paper shreds to a stick behind the cardboard and under a powerful light. Then he switched on the electric fan.

The fan made the silver-paper wiggle, the light turned the wiggles to twinkles, and, from where the camera sat on the other side of the black cardboard, here were your million frosty stars twinkling through the dark. All that remained was to enlarge your firmament to any size desired, add plenty of piping hot plot, and serve.

Youthful and Smart Model

There's something entirely youthful and smart about Style No. 3159 that has made it such a favorite in exclusive circles.

It is collarless with sleeves that extend to shoulders, with open V at front tied with scarf to create sunburst effect.

The front applied band extends down into panel of skirt that is part of the low placed circular flounce, giving the figure charming length.

A narrow belt slips beneath front panel at normal waistline.

Sleeves are slightly flared toward wrists.

It is black canton crepe, so popular for all-day wear, and is designed in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

It is equally as smart and serviceable in bottle green faille silk crepe.

Black crepe satin makes up attractively using the two surfaces with front panel, flounce and belt cut from the reverse of the crepe.

Feather-weight tweed in diagonal weave in Spanish red is exceptionally youthful and swagger for sports or street.

Black sheer velvet, printed sheer velvet in rust brown tones, midnight blue wool crepe, dahlia-purple flat silk crepe and orange-red flat silk crepe smartly appropriate.

U. W. CAGERS MAKE LAST BOW TONIGHT IN HISTORIC GYM

"Little Red Barn" Will See Its Last Inter-collegiate Battle

Madison—(AP)—The "little red barn of Wisconsin athletics" for more than a quarter of a century will breathe its last Saturday night as the scene of intercollegiate combat.

It is the University armory, built in the nineties and scene of all the Badger home games since that time. Next winter Wisconsin's cagers will move into the new $390,000 field house under construction at Camp Randall. Instead of 2,400 persons being wedged into the gymnasium, the Badgers will be able to cavort before 12,000 spectators.

The last intercollegiate combat in the final basketball game of the season for the Badgers, and Indiana universities five will be here fighting for a share of second place in the Western conference race.

Old armory has resounded with thrilling games. It lived the moments when Gus Tebell swished two field goals through the net in the final minute of play to defeat Purdue 19 to 15. It saw an inspired team down Chicago in 1924 to tie for the championship, and it was the scene of what has been called Wisconsin's basketball classic last year. The occasion was the Purdue game in which the Badgers came from the short end of a 13 to 8 half time lead to win and share the Western conference title with Michigan shortly afterwards.

All that is left for the armory is the state high school basketball tournament and the academy championships.

As the gymnasium takes its autumnal bow, three Badger cagers—the forward line—will play their last game for Wisconsin. They are Capt. "Bud" Foster, rated one of the great stars in Coach W. E. Meanwell's spacious firmament; Maury Farber and Carl Mathussen, the two midwinters who have been offensive clockwork this season.

BUTTER SUBSTITUTES ARE HIT BY DAIRYMEN

The Pleasant View Cooperative Dairymen's association last week adopted a resolution pledging members to discourage the use of oleomargarine and other dairy substitutes, according to Joseph M. Van Handel, secretary. The factory of this Association is located near Little Chute. The resolution adopted by the group reads:

"Be it resolved by the patrons of the Pleasant View Co-op Dairymen's association in meeting assembled that we go on record as discouraging the use of oleomargarine and that we pledge ourselves not to use any oleomargarine or butter substitutes hereafter in our homes."

FOREMEN, YARDMASTERS TO ATTEND CONFERENCE

Fradenburg, yardmaster of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway company, expect to attend a freight claim meeting at Hotel Northland, Green Bay, next Tuesday morning and afternoon. W. B. Basing, local agent, also may attend the meeting. A dinner will be served at the hotel at 12:15 Tuesday afternoon.

Ouja Board Used To Lead Aged Squaw To Kill Woman

Indian Woman Worked on Superstition to Force Artist's Wife's Murder

Buffalo, N. Y.—(AP)—Two Indian women were in jail today charged with murder after police said one had confessed she used a ouija board and tribal superstition to incite her aged accomplice to kill Mrs. Clothilde Marchand, noted artist. The unrequited love of Miss Lillian Jimerson, 39-year-old Seneca Indian for Henri Marchand, distinguished nature artist of the Buffalo Museum of Science, and husband of the victim, police said, was the motive for the killing. Miss Jimerson had worked as a model for Marchand.

Mrs. Marchand's body was found Thursday by her 12-year-old son. She had been beaten on the head and strangled with a wad of chloroform-soaked paper and cloth. Arrested yesterday at her home on the Cattaraugus Indian reservation, Lillian or Lilac, as she was known to her tribesmen, implicated Mrs. Nancy Bowen, 69, and told how she worked upon the old squaw's superstitious belief in witchcraft and black magic to bring about the killing.

She said she began last January by suggesting that she and Mrs. Bowen try to get into communication with Chief Charley, Mrs. Bowen's dead husband, in the spirit world by means of the ouija board. The old squaw was unable to read the letters on the board and Miss Jimerson formed them into sentences and translated into the Indian tongue what purported to be messages from Charley saying he had been killed by black magic and was wandering hungry and distraught in the spirit world waiting to be avenged.

Finally Mrs. Bowen agreed to tell Mrs. Marchand, police said, Miss Jimerson told them.

After telling her victim with several blows with a hammer, she choked her, then thrust the wad of paper soaked with chloroform into her throat, police said Mrs. Bowen told them.

High School Basketeers Lose To Fond du Lac Five

ORANGE THREATENS TO TIE COUNT IN FOURTH QUARTER

Sophomore Hopes of Next Year Open Opportunity to Play

FOND DU LAC High school basketball team advanced another step in the Fox river valley athletic conference race Friday evening by beating Appleton high school cagers 15 and 13. The game was entirely devoid of thrills until the last two minutes when there appeared a chance Appleton might tie the score or possibly get ahead and eke out a win.

Appleton opened the scoring on a toss by Berg but a few minutes later Fondy pulled out in front and thereafter was never headed. The count was 8 and 5 for the Cards at the end of the first half.

Opening the third quarter the Orange showed a spurt that gave them a slight advantage in points scored during the period. However, they were unable to overcome the first half lead and the third period ended with Fond du Lac ahead 12 and 9.

Shortly after play was resumed, the Cards pulled out with substantial lead but a last period effort on the part of the Orange brought the count within two points of a score. The Cards then stalled through the remaining minutes of play.

The game was listless until the final minutes, both teams showing defenses that stopped almost all efforts. Fond du Lac did most of its work on long shots, Appleton, on close in heaves.

Shortly after the second quarter opened Coach Joseph Shields of Appleton sent his sophomore hopes of next season into the game for whatever experience they might derive. Several also were given a chance to perform late in the fourth quarter.

Tuesday evening the Orange will wind up its 1929-30 season in a game with Marinette high school at Lawrence gym. The game originally was scheduled for March 21 but was moved up because college authorities wish to divert funds put away for the basketball which have been on the gym floor all winter.

Green Bay—(P)—East Green Bay dropped a Fox River Valley conference game to Sheboygan high by a 19 to 13 score here last night. West high also took a lummox on its home floor, falling before the attack of Marinette cagers in a conference tilt by a score of 24 to 12.

TWO BIG 10 GAMES CARDED TONIGHT

Purdue Meets Chicago and Badgers Entertain Indiana at Madison

Chicago—(P)—The only thing possible to make a more perfect season a victory over Chicago—will be the job of the Badgers' great basketball team tonight.

Undisputed champions for the second time in eight years, Coach Ward Lambert's cagers need only a win over the Marmoons, to become the first team since 1919 to go through a conference season undefeated. The Badgers already have beaten Chicago, and should have little trouble in repeating at LaFayette tonight. It will be the final appearance of Charles "Stretch" Murphy, greatest of Purdue's many basketball greats, as well as for Glen Harnesman, a fine forward and Herman Boos, 200 pound guard.

One of the games on the program for tonight, Indiana will invade Wisconsin, seeking revenge for a defeat earlier in the season, and giving Captain Branch McCracken of Indiana an opportunity to add to his total in the individual scoring battle with Murphy.

LAST GAME IN OLD GYM

Madison—(P)—Wisconsin will play its last basketball contest in the old red gymnasium, when it meets Indiana tonight. Next season Coach Walter E. Meunwell will move his cagers to the new $325,000 field house at Camp Randall.

APPLETON SWIMMERS COMPETE AT THE BAY

Appleton J. M. C. A. swimming team, known as the Aquatic club will invade Green Bay tonight for a meet with the Columbus club team of that city. The races will be staged in the club pool.

Appleton entries show Dobberstein and Hiltner in the 20 yard dash; Dobberstein and Klabbe in the 40 yard dash; Klabbe and Goodrich in the 100 yard dash; N. Johns and R. Carnes in the 40 yard back stroke; Wally Klein and R. Carnes in the 100 yard relay; and Klein and Goodrich in the 100 yard relay. Klein and Dobberstein, George Klein is directing activities of the team.

BROOKLYN MAY BE A SENSATION OR BUST THIS SEASON

Jocke Bobbie Has Real Ball Club if Things Turn Out Well

BY ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor
LEAKWATER, Fla. (AP)—(P)—The signing of an armistice along the Brooklyn baseball battle front has furnished new life and enthusiasm for 67-year-old uncle Wilbert Robinson and his flock. It remains to be seen whether the Robins fly higher this year than sixth place, something they have been unable to do since they last were pennant contenders in 1924. There are sufficient problems in the future to make any manager but Jocke Bobbie lose weight.

Brooklyn has an outfit that may be a sensation, as the Philles were last year, or it may again be a flop. It has exceptional batting strength, new and promising young blood, pitching greatness—even if only Jazzy Vance and Watson Clark are in form—and it has a new spirit, engendered by Robbie's infectious enthusiasm.

On the other hand, the jinx of physical ailments that ruined the club's chances last year has not entirely disappeared. The throwing arm of Glenn Wright, former Pirate horstop, has improved but is still a question mark. Del Bissone, slugger, first sacker, is not in condition, due to long illness and a crop of oils. The pitchers have developed pring wildness. Babe Herman, the club's leading batsman of 1929, has been a holdout. There are "ifs" to almost every angle of the club's organization.

The most interesting prospect is the sensational bat for regular jobs. Keystone youngsters, Neal (Mick) Finn and Gordon Slade, purchased for around $60,000 from the filions of the Pacific coast league. Finn is a second baseman and Slade a shortstop. They have come east with reputations on a par with that of Larry and Reese, the Oakland pair bought by the Yankees. Wright, who has met early tests and "Jazzy" Vance, will start as the keystone combination but Slade and Finn will see action.

Walter Gilbert, the former Atlanta product who made good last year at third base, is a fixture. Bissone will hold down first, if he is in shape. Otherwise one of the fielders, Eube Bressler or Harry Hendrick, will be assigned for temporary infield duty.

Johnny Frederick, who batted .323 and was one of the best first year men developed in either league last year, is a centerfield certainty and a termian, when he reports will parot right-field.

Robbie expects Alfonso Lopez, 21-year-old Tampa boy purchased from Atlanta, to develop as a first-rate starter, sharing the heavy work with Val Picinich.

Seventeen pitchers up for Robbie's eagle-eyed inspection but there is still only one Dazzy Vance in the line. Vance has been working harder than any rookie.

Among the other right-handers in camp, Ray Moss looks dependable as a regular, so does Chis Dudley, Clarence Blethen, purchased from Atlanta, and Hollis Thurston, a veteran rafted from San Francisco, each von 22 games and lost 11 in last minor league company in 1929. (Ed) Luque and Jughandle John Morrison will be assigned to regular duty.

William Watson Clark, south pawer of the staff, may have some outside help from Jumbo Jim Elliott, and Jim Faulkner, drafted from Buffalo.

BACKS OFF ON FOUR GAME EXHIBITION

Fort Myers, Fla. (AP)—Captain Ed Collins was in charge of a squad of 22 athletes who left today for Miami to take on the St. Louis Nationals in the first of a four-game exhibition series.

Lefty Glote was slated to open for the champions. A half dozen other pitchers were taken along to st their skill against rival batters in the absence of Max Bishop, Williams, a rookie, will be at second and Summa will play left field for Simmons who has not reported for duty because of a recurrence of collar ancles. The same ailment hit the Milwaukee mauler out of the opening games last year.

ARROLL PIONEERS IN WIN OVER RIPON, 35-26

Ripon (AP)—Carroll's Pioneers over then superiority over Ripon winning, 35 to 26, in a Big Four freewill game here today. Right was the second Carroll victory over Ripon and leaves the Pioneers defeated in the Big Four race.

RIVER FALLS WINS BASKETBALL TITLE

Defeat Superior Normal 32 and 28 to Settle Conference Championship

Superior (AP)—River Falls teachers are the undisputed basketball champions of the Wisconsin teacher conference.

They won the 1929-30 title last night by defeating Superior's Yellowjackets, 32 to 28 in a hot game. In doing so, they cleared away any possibility that Superior might tie for the title by winning its fight against the protesting of six team members. As matters stand, Superior is second. If the protests, filed by River Falls, Eau Claire and Stevens Point are upheld, the Yellowjackets will go in to the cellar.

The game marked the eighth successive conference win for the Falls. They finished the season undefeated.

GUS TEBELL MAY GO TO U. OF VIRGINIA

Raleigh, N. C. (AP)—Coach G. K. "Gus" Tebell has submitted his resignation as coach at North Carolina state college to accept a similar position at the university of Virginia, but he has been asked to reconsider his action.

Tebell has been at N. C. state since 1925. He is a member of the national basketball rules committee and is a graduate of the university of Wisconsin, where he starred in football and basketball.

COACH SAYS STALLING HURTING BASKETBALL

Evanson, Ill. (AP)—Arthur "Dutch" Lomborg, head basketball coach at Northwestern university, believes the rules committee must take action against stalling, to preserve the game's popularity.

"Too high a price is being placed on victory when more than a few minutes of game," Lomborg said. "It's all right to protect a one or two point lead at the finish, but settling down to stalling with 10 or 15 minutes to go, is more than the spectators can be expected to bear."

CUB BOSS TRYING A NEW BATTING ORDER

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal. (AP)—In their opener today with the Los Angeles coast leaguers, the National league champion Chicago Cubs presented an experimental batting order.

Talks To Parents

THE FAMILY PATTERN
BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE
It is a fact well known to psychiatrists that people carry over into adult life the emotional patterns of their childhood.

Especially is it true that individuals tend always to repeat the patterns of response which characterized their early relationship to members of their family.

Thus as any adult relationship develops an emotional quality, it tends to take on the feeling tones which were a part of that individual's attitude toward his father or his mother or a brother or a sister.

It is obvious that the most stable personal relationship into which the individual enters, that of husband or wife like a magnet, draws into itself all the feeling tones which characterized the chief loves of childhood.

In other relationships too family patterns come to the surface. An author who rather loosely upon upon an attitude toward authority which comes out always in his relationship to his employer or to anyone else who is placed over him.

The girl who was jealous of an attractive sister years later is distressed to discover that her affection for her dearest friend now and again becomes shot through with a horrid tinge of jealousy or envy.

For the growing child his family is the world in miniature and all that happens to him later is merely an amplification and variation of the theme.

The realization of this fact makes us sharply aware how important are the loves, hate and admiration of those early years, and how vital it is that they should be such as to exercise a good influence on all the years which follow.

The serene adjustment of personalities within the family circle is more than the peace of the moment. It is an insurance against personal readjustments in the years to come.

NEW LONDON EKES OUT 1 POINT WIN OVER CLINTONVILLE

Red and White Trails in First Half but Comes Back Strong

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Basketball fans who traveled to Clintonville on Friday evening to see New London's last conference game were amply repaid for their efforts, when the locals came out ahead by a 20-19 score. With the home boys playing a hard game in the first half, but seemingly unable to penetrate the Orange and Black's defense, things looked gloomy to Koiste's squad. Brown and Westphal were the only players to come through with baskets in the first half, "Minnor" making one, while "Pete" got the opposing forces twice. Pfeiffer added two points on free throws and Westphal made one in this half. With the exception of Gietzinger, who made two baskets and a free throw, each Clintonville man had one basket to his credit. However things pepped up in the second half, the Red and White defense holding the Clintonville squad to two baskets and two free throws. "Minnor" Brown put the lead up in the running, when he made the most peculiar one hand undershot ever seen on the Clintonville floor. He also made another basket in this half. "Chuckie" Pfeiffer sent the locals in the lead with two pretty shots and he and Westphal helped sew up the game by making three free throws between them. The lineup follows:

Demand for Chicks Greater Than Last Year

1/3 of Season's Capacity Already Sold

M. Schneider, Prop.

What we believe to be a criterion of the great increase in poultry raisers in this community is the fact that "One third of our total capacity has been sold to buyers within the trading area of Appleton."

There is no doubt that the aggregate demand for "Hatchery Chicks" is more than 200% greater than last season. Furthermore customers are placing their orders earlier than ever before.

No mistake is being made in choosing the "Poultry Business" for one's life work. There has never been an over production of this product. Extremely low prices of eggs never was caused by over production, but instead by an extremely high price which cut consumption.

Statistics show that there were about 7,500,000 pounds more of frozen eggs, imported from China in 1929 than in 1928, which I believe is directly due to the high price of eggs in the spring of 1929.

People must eat and will always eat eggs and poultry. The demand for eggs and chickens will be far greater due to the high cost of red meats. The outlook for the poultry business for the ensuing year looks the best ever, considering it from every angle.

SILVER Radio

(All testimonials here quoted entirely unsolicited)

"Think of the thrill of getting your dinner concert from KFI on a Silver Marshall away up here in Northern Wisconsin . . . At the end of the dial twisting I had 28 stations over 1000 miles away, from 21 states and 3 provinces of Canada, and WKAQ Porto Rico.
— Clinton B. De Soto, Withee, Wis."

"Last night picked up Halifax, Nova Scotia with such volume that I had to turn the volume control half off. We then proceeded to pick distance to the satisfaction of the prospect . . . I got his order then and there.
— L. Frank Miller, Brooklyn, N. Y."

"I am very much pleased with the Silver Marshall which I am using at the South Shore Country Club, Chicago. This is a remarkably good receiver for all kinds of radio reception. I have found that distant broadcasting stations can be turned in on all wave channels over the entire broadcasting band—one and only one at a time with a single tuning drum.
— Samuel H. Trude, Judge of the Municipal Court."

"It may interest you to know that the first station I tuned in was KOA (1500 miles away) and that last Saturday morning from 3 to 4 A. M. we listened to three stations in Japan—JOAK, JOGK, JOAH.
— Walter A. Reeves, Seattle Wash."

"The most I can say is—it was worth waiting for—the most wonderful set I ever had.
— The Radio Shoppe, H. O. Hornbake, South Brownsville, Pa."

A QUESTION of HONOR by Ruth Cross

A MARTIAL BARGAIN
A GLANCE in the mirror as she dressed for dinner convinced Anne that the tale marks of her encounter with the bramble bushes that afternoon could not be removed through any amount of magic. So when she belatedly appeared at the dinner table to join Morse, her aunt and Douglas, she was with an air of resignation—she dreaded explanations, but saw no escape.
She strove adroitly to keep the conversation in safe channels after the inevitable comment at her married beauty from her aunt and Morse's frown. But her aunt was not to be constrained and demanded details.
Realizing it would only excite further suspicion if she did not comply, Anne sketched a lively, carefully edited account of her adventure in the woods, but made no mention of Glenn.
When she had finished, Douglas, who was sitting immediately opposite, looked up, the knowing smile still curling his lips. "But she hasn't told you the most interesting part of the story," he declared. "You're no idea what an excellent doctor she had!"
There was a moment's silence, then, "Doctor—who's been having a doctor?" Mrs. Wilmot was a trifle hard of hearing, but she had felt the sudden acute tension in the air.
Morse had glanced quickly at Anne whose eyes were fixed unwaveringly on Douglas.
"It was the newest accident," Douglas went on with calm assurance, "a case of genuine good humor, his gaze meeting Anne's steadily, 'I was out for a few hours' shooting this afternoon, and I tumbled on the most romantic little scene imaginable. I won't go into the details, but—I must warn you again, Miss Anne—this with a most convincing assumption of friendly rivalry, 'It's dangerous flirting with the captain in the enemy's camp!'
"Without actually looking at him, Anne saw the flush that mounted slowly in Morse's face, as her aunt's sudden flash of comprehension and cold anger, Douglas alone seemed placidly unconscious that he had said or done anything out of the ordinary. He went on eating his dinner quite as if nothing had happened just as the tension was growing unbearable. Jarvis murmured something to the waiter, first to the house, and Morse left the room.
Anne lifted her eyes to Douglas, who was still devoting himself smilingly to his dinner, and considered him thoughtfully for a rather prolonged interval—her enemy had seemed finally, she asked casually—her eyebrows slightly elevated—Were you quite through?"
He looked up and bowed as profoundly as his sitting posture admitted of. "Quite."
At this juncture, Jarvis reappeared and approached the attorney. Douglas also rose, excused himself with painstaking politeness, and went towards the living-room. Anne and her aunt were left alone—facing each other in a terrible sort of silence, worse than any speech.
Mrs. Wilmot was the first to speak. "I knew all along—if there was another man within a hundred miles—you would ruin everything!" Anne merely bent her head—without making any answer at all. After a while, her aunt rose, heavily. She looked mortally stricken, supporting herself with one fist clenched against the table edge. She added slowly and with her head bowed, "Very well, I'm through with you in the future, you can shift for yourself."
"Yes, you told me that before, Anne said tonelessly.
"Well, I mean it. The older woman struck her plump, white fist emphatically against the table. "You can get out—I never want to see or hear of you again!"
"But suppose," Anne said reflectively, "suppose I haven't ruined everything?"
Anne watched until the double doors had swung to behind her—sat on for some moments chin in palms, staring straight ahead of her at nothing. She got up at last and went towards the living room.
Just inside the door, she halted. Morse and Douglas were coming out of the study with Burkhalter and Tony, the Mexican, whom she had seen at the dance. Anne gave them a casual glance and turned slowly towards the foot of the stairs.
She knew that Morse was watching her from under lowered lids—standing with head bent, hands clasped behind his back. The moment electric with possibilities.
If it passed—
As she started towards the last flight of stairs Morse stirred. He came forward abruptly, crossed over and stood just underneath the landing. He called her name—in a low tone.
"I wish to speak with you," he said until in a tone that ought to have been a command. "In my study—if you don't mind."
They crossed the room in silence. He threw open the study door, and stood aside for her to enter. Morse followed and closed the door behind him.
They stood facing each other for some moments, neither speaking. Morse made no motion for her to be seated. He simply stood, bluntly to the point, "Will you marry me tomorrow?"
"Tomorrow?" Anne repeated thoughtfully. She took a step away from him, rested her hands on the back of a chair—between them.
Morse nodded. He was watching her intently. "When you are my wife," he added significantly, "I shall of course expect you to conduct yourself accordingly. In fact, I mean to see to it that you do."
"Aren't you rather—locking the stable before the horse is even inside?" Anne suggested lightly.
"Perhaps of course you have the last word on that. But—I want there to be no doubt as to the conditions," he paused. "Well, how about it?"
Anne, who had been watching him curiously, bent toward him a little across the chair. "Why trouble to ask me at all?" she murmured. The reckless mirth in her eyes was even more pronounced. Her lips curved into a faintly scornful, yet altogether provocative bow. "You know that I can't possibly refuse you that my aunt and I are at our last gasp, financially speaking. You can make your own terms."
Morse first startled expression gave way quickly to one of admiration. He seemed above all things audacious and plucky.
"I will marry you tomorrow or—whenever you see fit. And in the future no doubt I shall do just about as you say. The hand that pulls the purse strings, you know—she broke off, struggling lightly, then went on with a smile. "I give you fair warning, though, I am a very extravagant woman. I shall expect you to be a good sport and pay the bills without a murmur—or even an inward groan."
"You can count on me for that—!" Morse took a second step toward her, and now that we understand another so thoroughly—"He stooped and kissed the hand on the chair back, unclasped the fingers deliberately one by one and shoved the chair out of his way.

OTHER COMMODITY PRICES ARE LOWER BUT BREAD IS NOT

Head of Big Baking Concern Explains Why Price Is Up Although Wheat Dropped

BY JOHN A. CRONE
(Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press)

New York—(C.P.A.)—The new one dollar bill will buy more coffee, butter, eggs, and tea than did the old one dollar bill a few months ago at the corner store for the delicatessen, but these places have made little or no reduction in the price of a loaf of bread, despite the big drop in wheat.

The cost of bread has not come down wholesale, the "little fellow" will tell you, and investigation at the big bakeries proves is correct. Bakers say the chain groceries sometimes sell bread at or below cost.

"The large bread baking organizations," explained the executive head of one of the biggest baking concerns in the country today, "are but little affected by fluctuations in the wheat market, since they have to buy their flour as they need it and at prices which are more dependent on conditions in the milling industry than on those in the grain market."

"From the chain baking organizations' point of view," he continued, "the price charged by the miller for conversion of wheat into flour is most important. This milling charge will depend upon the activity of the mill, its volume of business on hand, and the outlook."

"Occasionally the miller encounters a slack period and is forced to reduce his conversion to bare operating cost or even less, which gives the baker his buying opportunity. Under such conditions he may be able to buy his flour for the actual cost of the wheat, for the miller finds it more profitable to operate at no profit or even at a slight loss than to shut down pending receipt of new orders."

"Another factor entering into the price of flour is the varying premium which the baker must pay for particular kinds of blended flour. This may amount to from 8 to 25 cents a bushel for the finer grades of wheat."

WARDENS TAUGHT HOW TO DO THEIR WORK

Madison—(A.P.)—The Wisconsin conservation commission today concluded the first annual school for the education of field men.

Three schools were held during the week, each consisting of a two-day session. The first was held at Ladysmith, the second at Antigo and the third here.

M. W. MacKenzie, chief warden, conducted the schools which were instituted to increase the efficiency of the field workers by a study of warden problems. Paul D. Kelleter, director of the commission and other administrative heads attended some of the sessions.

Wardens in the northwestern section of Wisconsin while the Antigo school drew wardens from the northeastern part of the state. Madison served the wardens of the southern section. About 25 wardens attended each school.

STOCK RECOVERY SHOWS SIGNS OF REACHING LIMIT

Market Becomes Irregular Although Many Issues Are Strong

BY STANLEY W. PRENOSIL
Associated Press Financial Editor
New York.—(AP)—The recovery in stock prices during the past week, which has lifted the general index to 90 issues to the highest level since the November break, showed signs of slowing up in today's brief session of the market under the weight of heavy profit taking and occasional short selling.

Scores of issues were marked up 1 to 3 points in today's early trading, but the gains were cut down by realizing, rather than long list of issues sold to 3 points below yesterday's final quotations.

Easy credit conditions and expectations of an early recovery in general business, expressed by President Hoover after yesterday's cabinet meeting, provided the background for the advance. Weekly mercantile reviews continued to stress irregularity in the business and trade situations.

The day's business reports contained a larger proportion of unfavorable factors. Directors of the Coca-Cola International corporation increased the annual dividend from $8 to $12, but Grigsby Grunow directors omitted the usual 50 cents quarterly payment due at this time. The Timken Roller Bearing Co., showed slightly larger earnings for 1929 than the year before but the Barnett Leather and Homestake Mining companies made favorable comparisons with the previous year.

People's Gas ran up six points to 17 1/2, Eastman Kodak 6 1/2 to 24 1/2, International Cement 4 to 6 1/2, General Refractories 3 1/2 to 7 1/2, International Business Machines 3 to 18 1/2, Pacific Gas & Electric 3 to 6 1/2, Pierce Oil Preferred 3 to 34 and Vanadium Steel 2 to 7 1/2, all new tops for the year, but not all of the gains were maintained.

Merchandise rumors stimulate the demand for some of the independent steel shares, Bethlehem crossing 10 1/2 to a new high while Gulf Steels and Michigan Steels advanced more than two points each.

Southern Railway fell 1 1/2 to a new low level for the year. The closing was irregular. Total sales approximated 1,800,000 shares.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

New York.—(AP)—Building and engineering contracts awarded last month in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains reached a total of $317,053,000, according to the F. W. Dodge Corp., compared with the January total of $23,975,200, there was a decrease of only 2 per cent; and February, 1929, was 12 per cent below January, 1929. Total contracts awarded during the first two months of this year have amounted to $641,028,200, a decrease of 17 per cent from that for the first two months of last year.

The Union Pacific railroad has ordered 25 locomotives from the American Locomotive Co.

Stockholders of the Fox Film Corp., of record March 11, will have the right to subscribe for the new debt securities and class "A" stock to be issued as part of the rehabilitation of the company's finances.

The Delco Light Co., of Dayton, Ohio, a subsidiary of General Motors, is now manufacturing a new system for creating gas for use in cooking stoves, water heaters and similar domestic appliances in homes not served by city gas mains.

Directors of the Coca-Cola International Corp., a holding company for the Coca-Cola Co., of Atlanta, Ga., have declared a quarterly dividend of $3 a share on the common stock, placing it on a $12 annual basis, as against $8 paid previously. The dividends is payable April 1, to stock of record March 12.

The need for more working capital is needed to finance the increased volume of business the company expected to do this year and for development of an electric refrigerator.

TOURIST TRADE IS VITAL FACTOR IN BUSINESS OF U. S.

Volume of This Industry
Last Year Is Estimated at
$4,000,000,000

Babson Park, Fla.—The tourist business has grown to the proportions of a major industry. An estimate of all expenditures in 1929 by tourists, vacationists, campers, etc., is about $4,000,000,000. Most of this money was spent in the United States. Only 21 per cent of it, or $860,000,000 was spent in foreign countries. Hence the tourist trade is essentially a domestic industry, and one of great magnitude and importance. Its total value is about 45 per cent of our total national income. Its stimulating effects spread over scores of other trades and industries. Retail business, gas and oil, sporting goods, wearing apparel, automobiles, garages, hotels, restaurants, amusement places, in fact all business in the localities effected feel its beneficial influence. Railroads, steamship lines, motor bus routes, all transportation systems, rely on tourists for a considerable part of the passenger business. The air transport companies are now planning on tourist traffic in increasing volume. Air touring may become as common in a few years as automobile, railroad, and steamboat tours are at present.

DOLLAR SPENT LOCALLY
The whole living expenses of tourists are distributed among the local business men in the cities, towns and resorts which they visit. For example 25 cents out of each dollar goes to the hotel where the tourist stays, and 75 per cent goes directly to the tradespeople of the community. The hotel in turn spends 71 per cent of its share locally for supplies, taxes, salaries, wages, etc. At least 93 per cent of every dollar that the tourist spends stays in the locality where he visits.

RESORT BUSINESS GOOD
The tourist trade has held up remarkably well this winter considering the stock market decline and the recession in general business. Florida and California both report a larger number of tourists than last year. Expenditures have, perhaps, been slightly lower per tourist but the increased number brings the total value of the trade fully equal to a year ago and probably somewhat larger. More people of moderate means are noticeable among the tourists at the famous winter resorts, possibly because these were less affected by stock market losses than the wealthy. Also, the slowing up of business and finance from the feverish pace at which it had been going in 1929 makes it possible for many people to find time to travel, which was denied them in the activity of the preceding winter. More important still, however, is the underlying upward trend of the tourist trade, which like the movies, continues to grow regardless of business depression or prosperity.

SEE FAIR VOLUME
The experience of the leading winter resorts leads to expectations of a fairly good summer tourist trade this year. Of course, financial losses and unemployment may tend to limit the amount which the tourists can spend, but the slowing up in business often means more spare time and may tend to increase the number of individual tourists that aggregate amount of expenditures should be large. Summer resorts, the beaches, the mountains, and the lakes should experience fairly heavy traffic. New England, especially because this is the year of the great Tercentenary anniversary of the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, should attract many people who have never visited that section before. Last year New England tourist trade amounted to something like $250,000,000.

This year because of the Anniversary program it should reach at least $300,000,000. Massachusetts will get a larger share of this trade than in previous years. The state of Maine also is rapidly forging to the front as a summer resort. Over a million people from other states came to Maine last year for fishing, hunting, camping, and other recreation. They spent more than $100,000,000. New Hampshire with its beautiful White Mountains, has for many years been a mecca for summer tourists and vacationists, and recently has attained great fame as a winter sports resort. New England is indeed one of the beautiful spots for tourists.

Another very attractive section is California. Southern California particularly, is making a bid for summer as well as winter tourist trade, and is having considerable success along this line. California is not dependent on the tourist trade, but nevertheless, that trade is a very stimulating factor to the state. It should not be assumed, however, that tourist trade will be confined to any one section. Practically every state in the Union has some worthwhile attraction. The Pacific northwest, particularly, is gaining great popularity because of its scenic beauty and its sporting attractions. All along the Pacific and Atlantic seaboard beach resorts experience heavier traffic each year. Canada is a very popular section for tourists. In fact we do not have to bother with passports. Nevertheless, I feel strongly that the cultural advantages of foreign travel far outweigh any economic loss arising from spending our money abroad.

FOREIGN TRAVEL LARGER
I believe thoroughly in the slogan "see America first," certainly we have as good roads in this country as are found anywhere, as well as beautiful and spectacular scenery. Moreover travel is easier here because we do not have to bother with passports. Nevertheless, I feel strongly that the cultural advantages of foreign travel far outweigh any economic loss arising from spending our money abroad.

FARMER LOSES LITTLE IN WHEAT SLUMP

CHICAGO CASH WHEAT PRICES

BY ALLARD SMITH
Vice President, The Union Trust Company, Cleveland

THE outstanding fact of the extensive decline in wheat prices since the start of 1930 is that the farmer has largely been an innocent bystander, so far suffering very little. The real brunt of the fall has been borne by speculators, millers and flour buyers.

For once, at least, in the history of the country, the farmer has successfully outguessed the speculator. He speedily sold the bulk of his crop at high prices as soon as it was harvested last year. Of the 1929 crop of around 800,000,000 bushels of wheat the government estimated that on January 1, farm reserves were 50,000,000 bushels below one year ago, or only 130,000,000 bushels, including 30,000,000 bushels for seed. Over and above this amount it is estimated that 45,000,000 bushels were in other hands.

Since the beginning of the year May wheat in the last week of February had fallen nearly 30 cents a bushel to the lowest level in 16 years at this season. Dollar wheat became a reality at some of the great market centers. The farmer has a further protection which the speculator has not. The Federal Farm Board's Stabilization Corp. has been paying $1.18 a bushel for No. 2 hard wheat at Chicago and $1.13 for the same grade at Kansas City and Omaha. Farmers who join a co-operative may get the higher prices for wheat they have to sell.

What has caused the reversal in wheat prices? The real reason is found in world supplies. With a carry-over of almost 600,000,000 bushels from the 1928 crop, the average available supplies last year were 3,500,000,000 bushels. This compares with average consumption of 3,500,000,000 bushels.

In addition, there is the unknown factor of Russian wheat. The threat of possible resumption of large exports from that country overhangs the world wheat market, already overburdened with excess supplies. The extreme low price level indicates the possibility of some recovery.

Housewives Look Over
Equipment to See What Is Needed

With the rapid approach of spring and summer weather, housewives are again confronted with perplexing problems of the household. The careful woman will again try to solve her greatest economic problems through the process of elimination. Again she will try to decide what she will purchase, or what she can get along without.

On the other hand there are those housewives, who again will soon stage their annual spring buying tour. Already they are looking forward to the new kinds of drapes, furniture, rugs, or paint jobs which will adorn the rooms of their homes.

Many careful housewives, already are sorting out the furniture which has undergone a long wear and tear siege during the winter months, which is to be sent to the cabinet makers to be repaired or remodeled. An annually they save their husbands much money through this wise, economical practice.

The E. H. Mueller Cabinet shop located at 313 E. Washington-st is one of the oldest and most reliable shops in the city to which you can send your furniture for proper attention. Only expert cabinet makers are employed at the shop and you can rest assured that the work is going to be done perfectly.

Any kind of furniture, regardless of style, design or color will be repaired and renovated at the Mueller shop. Old pieces, marred and worn by long use can be made to look like new modernistic furniture. The Mueller Cabinet shop also specializes in the refinishing of furniture.

If an old chair sounds as though it is getting weak in the joints, send it to the shop to be rebuilt like new. If a table is badly marred or damaged by water, scratches or marks left by other liquids, it can easily be refinished and will be made to look like new.

For further information inquire at the Mueller Cabinet shop at 313 E. Washington-st or phone 2225.

Since wrist watches replaced the old style pocket watches a few years ago, there has been a growing demand for new watch crystals. It is reported at the new R. S. Given Jewelry Shop, 333 W. College-ave.

Mr. Given, who formerly operated a jewelry store for four years at Hortonville, specializes in the re-plating of new watch crystals. He carries a complete line of crystals, including the unbreakable styles in all sizes and shapes to fit any man or woman's watch.

A complete line of costume jewelry at popular prices also is handled there. New creations in bracelets, rings, necklaces and other kinds of costume jewelry are received weekly.

Mr. Given has had considerable experience in repairing watches and all jewelry. Work done at the shop is guaranteed to be as near perfect as possible and the customer can rest assured that when his or her watch has been repaired it will run like a new one.

If your watch refuses to keep time accurately, don't meddle with it yourself, but take it to the Given Jewelry store where it will receive the proper attention. Many watches are ruined because the owner has experimented with them or tried to fix a hair or main spring himself.

Despite This Fact, Senior
Shares Fail to Gain in

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES

Stocks — If there is to be any advance in the market price of public utility common stocks to a point where the yield at present dividend rates is so small as to be unattractive to any investor dependent on income from his securities brings to the front once more the question of the status of the preferred stocks of these same companies.

Another dispute the basis for the rise in the utility common stock in so far as it reflects steadily increasing earnings. The only point in doubt is how far this advance can go without checking legitimate investment demand. There must be a level at which the prospect for capital appreciation is overbalanced by the negligible yield on the money invested in the common stocks.

Meanwhile the senior shares of these same companies have had practically no gain in the market quotation. The margin of safety for the dividend is higher today than it ever was but there has been no reflection of this in the price of preferred stocks.

The reason, of course, is that such shares have no speculative appeal. The dividend rate is fixed and cannot be changed and most of these shares are redeemable at a figure not far above the market. Against these disadvantages, if they may be called such, is the generous return on the investment.

To take only a few examples Columbia Gas preferred, Electric Bond and Share preferred, American Power and Light preferred, Alabama Power preferred, North American 6 per cent preferred and Philadelphia Company 6 per cent preferred all sell to yield from 5 1/2 to 6 per cent which is more than can be obtained on almost any other security with equal safety.

Weather, Late Easter and Farm Situation Have Caused Laggardness

BY J. C. ROYLE

Washington—(CPA)—Considerable impatience is being expressed over the slow pace of industrial recovery. The pace, according to sound statisticians, is not lagging. It simply has not attained the speed that many hoped. The weather, the late Easter and the farm situation have all been factors, but none of these is regarded as cause for alarm.

On the other side of the picture is shown the decided increase in the production of automobiles, which came somewhat as a surprise in view of the gloomy forebodings earlier in the year. Steel output is being splendidly maintained and new orders for railroad equipment are showing up in most satisfactory volume.

The report of the treasury department and the federal reserve board on wholesale trade carries considerable conviction because of the wide range covered by reported betterments. For example, farm implements, a necessity, showed a big sales increase, and so did silk goods, which are not regarded as a necessity.

BUSINESS BETTER
The radio industry is doing better in general, although some corporations are in decidedly precarious position. Aviation is showing marked improvement in the case of the commercial lines. For the first time passenger planes operating on regular routes have been booked full and transportation corporation are putting on additional machines. This is attributed to the recent reduction in rates to approximately half fare and pullman levels.

Fuel producers are in a state of uncertainty. Gasoline producers and distributors are cutting prices in various sections. The so-called independents are still fighting for a tariff. Voluntary restriction of production is being urged and fought. A six-day week is proposed. Government suits in connection with mergers and price maintenance still have to be fought out.

The bituminous coal operators are suffering from competition of cheap fuel oil and natural and artificial gas. The fact that the anthracite wage agreement expires this summer and that discussions must soon begin between operators and miners is casting a shadow on the industry with its 150,000 workers. President Lewis of the United Mine workers is facing a bitter fight in Illinois.

TAOIST PRIESTS FIND HAVENS IN HANKOW'S DENS

Proprietors of Gambling
Houses Permit Preaching
on Commission

Hankow—(P)—Driven from their temples by government decree, Taoist priests in Hankow, exponents of one of the oldest religions in China, have taken refuge in gambling dens and other smirch places where the proprietors permit them to preach on a commission basis.

The faithful who attend services are taxed a small sum each and the priests divide with their hosts in lieu of rent.

Since the beginning of the Chinese Republic the authorities have conducted a campaign against the Taoists, branding them as nothing more than charlatans, clairvoyants and fortune tellers. Numerous decrees have been issued at Nanking ordering the priests to vacate their temples and find other professions or leave the country.

But a religion as old as Taoism, no matter what the government may think about it, could not thus be swept out of existence. Most of the Taoists in Hankow left their temples, but they took up headquarters in side-streets and alleyways, only to be driven out by the police.

Proprietors of gambling houses, seeing an opportunity to increase their receipts, engaged the priests to tell fortunes to their customers and to conduct services at a fixed sum per person. Under this sort of protection, the Taoists have contrived to keep their faith alive although many have been thrown into jail.

Various other methods have also been resorted to by the Taoists in keeping their public. One enterprising priest opened an establishment which he called the "School of Perpetual Truth." He charged a minimum fee of $6 to all clients who consulted him at his office and as much as $50 to visit the faithful in their homes. He was recently arrested.

Another equally enterprising priest rented a small house on the outskirts of the city and called it "Incense Hill Temple." Hundreds flocked there until the police learned of it and arrested the Taoist.

Dozens of similar cases have occurred from time to time, not only in Hankow but in neighboring towns and cities where Taoism has flourished for centuries. Despite their reverses, the priests are conducting a valiant fight against the government's edicts.

RAILROAD MERGERS ARE SLOWLY BEING FORMED IN EAST

Important Developments in Situations Are Expected in Near Future

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright 1930, by Cons. Press
New York—(CPA)—Step by step, slowly but surely, the knitting together of railroad lines in the eastern trunkline territory is taking place. Important developments in this situation are likely to come at almost any time.

The approval just made by the interstate commerce commission of the Baltimore & Ohio's convertible bond issue, which was partly for the purpose of acquiring the Buffalo & Susquehanna railway, practically completes one detail of the proposed new Baltimore & Ohio system. This has been carried out quietly but persistently against the opposition of competing lines. Now the Baltimore & Ohio has before it the larger job of obtaining complete control of the Reading-Jersey Central which it most needs to round out its system.

Under the interstate commerce commission's recent consolidation plan the Lehigh valley was assigned to the Washash or fifth system in east. Control of it is held between the Washash and the Pennsylvania railroad interests.

PARTY TO TRADER
It is understood, however, that the Lehigh valley is likely to be a party in the trade that may take between three of the major eastern systems and that eventually it will become the property of the New York Central when the latter agrees to sell its present holdings of reading common stock to the Baltimore & Ohio, The Baltimore line would be in possession of nearly two-thirds of the entire outstanding Reading common stock.

Should this plan out it would be an interesting development in view of the fact that a few years ago the New York Central held about 20 per cent of Lehigh Valley stock which it had bought to protect itself against other railroad combinations. It should its Lehigh Valley at a very good price and at a substantial profit to the Delaware & Hudson. In turn the Delaware & Hudson sold out to the Pennsylvania and Washash interests at a figure said to have been about $100 a share.

There would, of course, have to be an agreement on the part of the Pennsylvania railroad to give up the Lehigh Valley to its competitor. It might be willing to do this in order to work out a reasonable plan in the east along the lines originally proposed when the trunk line territory was to be divided up into four parts rather than five.

Under these conditions the only other important independent line in the east, the Lackawanna, would go to the Chesapeake & Ohio-Nickel Plate-Erie group where it has been assigned in the interstate commerce commission's plan. So far as can be learned, this is agreeable to the other three eastern systems.
